PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THE object of this work is to furnish a comprehensive Index to the case law of India as laid down in the reported decisions of the High Courts and Privy Council, analogous to that already compiled of the statute law. It would perhaps be too much to hope that this object has been fully attained, but I can at least claim for it that it goes further towards success in that attainment than any previous work of the kind in India. I shall be satisfied with this attempt towards such an end if it be found in some degree useful to the Government in its legislation, to the judicial officers of Government, and last, but by no means least, to the members of all the branches of the profession to which I have the honour to belong.

The work contains the gist of the cases reported in 166 volumes of Reports extending over a period of fifty years,—viz., from 1836 to 1886. Besides the reports published in India, it contains the cases in Moore's Indian Appeals, without which, of course, no digest of Indian cases would be complete; and also such cases from the Law Reports, Indian Appeals, as are not reported in the Indian reports. The names of the reports are set out in the annexed list showing the periods over which they extend, the decisions of what Court they contain, and the abbreviations used for them in the references throughout the Digest.

With respect to a few of those volumes which have been reprinted, and in the later editions of which the paging is different from that in the original edition, I have given, wherever I could do so, both pagings. I think this difference of paging will be found with respect only to the first and second volumes of the Bombay Reports, the first volume of the N.-W. Provinces Reports, and the Agra Full Bench volume.

In some of the volumes—instances chiefly, however, confined to the Agra Reports—the paging is in some places manifestly incorrect, some pages having the same numbers. In these cases I have generally given the page which would have been correct had the paging been correctly continued.

In cases where it is not otherwise apparent that the case is a Privy Council or Full Bench decision, I have added in the reference the letters P. C. or F. B., as the case may be, to indicate this. It should be noticed that all the cases in the Supplemental Volume of the Bengal Law Reports are Full Bench cases. This is not the case, however, with the Full Bench volume of the Weekly Reporter, containing cases decided in 1862-63; the letters W. R., F. B., therefore merely represent the abbreviation of the name of that volume, and do not necessarily imply that the case to which they are appended is a Full Bench case. In fact, as all the Full Bench cases in that volume are reported elsewhere, cases to which the letters W. R., F. B., alone are appended are probably not Full Bench cases, though some of them may be decided by more than two Judges.

With the names of the cases I have had great difficulty,—a difficulty which, from the character of Indian names, is, it seems to me, almost impossible to overcome. The general rule I have followed has been to cut out from the commencement of the names all prefixes and titles. The principal of these are Shahzada, Shah, Maharajah, Maharani, Rajah, Rani, Nawab, Sahib, Sri, Sreemutty, Mussamat, Bibi, Thakoor, Syed, Moulvie, Moonshee, Mir, Mirza, Hadji, Sheikh, Baboo, Coomar, Cowar or Kooer, and perhaps a few others. I have omitted these as far as possible with the object in view not only of greater brevity in the names, but also in order that, in the Index of Cases, names that are similar may come together, and not as they sometimes do in an index of names, some with the prefix or title and under one letter, and the same name without it under another letter. I have made exceptions to this rule only in cases where the name is given in the following form :—"Maharajah of Vizianagram," "Rajah of Shivagunga," "Nawab Nazim of Bengal," etc.

As to the spelling of the names, I found it hopeless to attempt any consistency, for the various volumes of reports go through all the possible variations in the manner of spelling any particular Indian name, and I came to the conclusion that it was best to spell the cases as they appear in the reports. Had I adhered in all cases to any one mode of spelling, the result would have been that any cases spelt in the report in a different way would probably never be found by looking in the Index of Cases, or, if discovered at all, only after much more expenditure of time and trouble than would be desirable; and such a method would, it seemed to me, lead in other ways to difficulty and confusion.

I at first intended to issue the work in not more than two volumes, but owing to the material having taken up more space in print than I imagined it would do, and it being desirable not to have the volumes of a bulk inconvenient for ready use and reference, it has been decided to issue it in five volumes to be published successively, and, if possible, within the present year. To each volume will be appended a table of the headings contained in it, and the last volume will contain a list of all the cases contained in the five volumes. The paging will be continuous throughout the work.

J. V. WOODMAN.

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

SINCE the issue of the first Digest, which included the decisions of the High Courts and Privy Council down to 1886, the Author brought out three separate volumes containing the cases from 1887—1889, 1890—1893, and 1894—1897, respectively. The present edition is a consolidation of the previous Digests, with the addition of the rulings from 1898—1900 inclusive. Its bulk has consequently increased to a very considerable extent. A reference to the Table of Reports will show that the number of volumes of Reports digested is 241, as compared with 166 volumes digested in the first edition. The first four numbers of the Calcutta Weekly Notes have also been incorporated, as frequent reference is made to them in the Calcutta High Court. An idea of the increase of the size of this edition may be gained from a comparison of the number of volumes and columns of the two editions. Whereas the first Digest comprised five volumes including the Table of Cases, the present one is made up of five volumes of the Digest alone, and has a separate volume for the Table of Cases. In the former publication, Volume I contained the letters A—D and consisted of 1,562 columns; the present Volume I contains A—C only, and runs into 2,054 columns. In order to keep down the size of the volumes, the Author has been obliged in several places to omit lists of cases from cross references, thereby avoiding repetition, without, however, impairing the value of the work. The scheme and arrangement of the Digest remains the same, but Act XXVI of 1867, which was put under the Stamp Acts, has been transposed to Court Fees, and Bombay Act I of 1865 now appears under the heading "Bombay Survey and Settlement Act I of 1865." Many separate minor headings have been brought under more general headings, and several sub-headings have been somewhat verbally altered. The vernacular terms and expressions which are scattered throughout the Reports are now printed in roman letters instead of italics, and some uniformity in their spelling has been observed.

ABANDONMENT OF CHILDREN.

1. ——— Penal Code, s. 317.—S. 317 of the Penal Code was intended to prevent the abandonment or desertion by a parent of his or her children of tender years in such a manner that the children, not being able to take care of themselves, may run the risk of dying or being injured. IN THE MATTER OF FELANI HABIANI . . 16 W. R., Cr., 12

2. ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 317—Exposure of child—Facts constituting the offence defined—Child left in charge of a blind woman and deserted.—A woman who was the mother of an illegitimate child, aged at the time about six months, left the child in charge of a blind woman in whose company she was, saying that she was going to get food and would return shortly. She went away to another village, and did not return. Apparently she never intended to return. Upon these facts it was held by BLAIR and AIKMAN, JJ. (dissentiente KNOX, J.), that the mother of the child could not properly be convicted of the offence defined by s. 317 of the Penal Code. ABATEMENT OF PROSECUTION.

——— Adultery—Death of Husband.—The death of the husband does not necessarily put an end to a prosecution for adultery under s. 497 of the Penal Code. ANONYMOUS . 4 Mad., Ap., 55

ABATEMENT OF RENT.

1. ——— Ground of Abatement—Causes beyond control—Act X of 1859, s. 18.—The real meaning of s. 18, Act X of 1859, is that the grounds for which an abatement of rent may be claimed by a raiyat must have resulted from causes beyond his control. MUNSOOR ALI v. HARVEY [11 W. R., 291

2. ——— Diluvion—Act X of 1859, s. 18 (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19)—Deduction in suit for arrears of rent.—Rent of a talukh may be abated if a portion of the talukh be washed away. Independently of s. 18, Act X of 1859, a suit for abatement of rent will lie by a talukhdar on the ground that part of the talukh has been washed away. A deduction may be made on such ground in a suit for arrears of rent. AFSUROODEEN v. SHOROOSHEE BALA DABEE . Marsh., 558
SAVI v. OBHOY NATH BOSE 2 W. R., Act X, 27

3. ——— Onus probandi.—The onus lies on the defendant in a suit for arrears of rent of proving to what deduction he is entitled, and of showing precisely what lands have disappeared. SAVI v. OBHOY NATH BOSE [2 W. R., Act X, 27

4. ——————— Diluvion—Right of occupancy.—A tenant, whether with or without a right of occupancy, is entitled to abatement of rent for land washed away unless precluded by the term of his kabuliat from claiming any abatement. ENAYUTOOLAH v. ELAHEBUKSH [W. R., 1864, Act X, 42

5. ——————— Cause of action.—When a diluvion takes place, a right of suit to obtain an abatement of jumma accrues from the time when the plaintiff is compelled to pay the rent named in his pottah without the allowance of the abatement claimed by him. BARRY v. ABDOOL ALI . . . W. R., 1864, Act X, 64

6. ——————— Talukh created before 1790.—Quære.—Whether the proprietor of a talukh created before the Permanent Settlement can claim abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion. RAM CHURN BYSACK v. LUCAS [16 W. R., 279

7. ——————— Waiver of right to deduction.—In a suit for arrears of rent of land adjacent to a river where defendant claims deduction on account of diluvion, and it is found that the agreement under which he holds requires measurement to be made once in three years, no account being taken of accretion or decretion occurring within that period: if the tenant has waived his right of measurement and has held over, it must be presumed that he elects to continue to hold at the same jumma as before, and his claim to deduction cannot be allowed. KRISTO KINKUR PURAMANICK v. RAMDHUN CHETTANGIA [24 W. R., 326

8. ——————— Kabuliat—Sale by tenant of his tenure—Suit against purchaser.—In a suit against the purchaser at an auction sale of a tenure under a kabuliat, by which it was agreed that the former tenant should not be entitled to abatement of rent on any ground and should be liable for interest at a particular rate for all arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that as auction purchaser he was not bound by the terms of the kabuliat; that he was entitled to abatement on the ground of diluvion of portion of the demised lands, and only bound to pay interest at a reasonable rate upon arrears of rent. Held, that defendant was bound by the terms of the kabuliat entered into by his predecessor. ISHAN CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. CHUNDER KANT ROY . . 13 C. L. R., 55

9. ——————— Transferee of tenant, Right of, to abatement.—A tenant has a right to, and can claim an abatement of rent where the area of the land, the subject of his tenure, has been diminished by diluvion, and such right passes to a purchaser on a sale of the tenure. Prosunno Moyee Dossee v. Doya Moyee Dossee, 22 W. R., 275, distinguished. KALI PRASANNA RAI v. DHANANJAI GHOSE . I. L. R., 11 Calc., 625

10. ——————— Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 18.—A raiyat cannot sue for abatement of rent simply because the lands which he holds are rated higher than those of the same description and with similar advantages held by raiyats of the same class in the vicinity. 12. ——————— Land less than stated in lease—Decree apportioning rent, reserved in a mokurari lease, to the land transferred—Lessee getting possession of less land than stated in lease—Act XI of 1859, s. 54—Right of lessee to abatement of rent.—A decree had determined that lands leased in mokurari to a lessee, with a fixed rent thereon, were less in extent than they were specified to be in the pottahs that comprised them, the lessors not having title to the whole; and the lessee had obtained possession of the less estate:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to a corresponding abatement of the rent reserved. The revenue-paying mehal, within which were the lands subject to the mokurari, such lands being shares of mouzahs therein, was afterwards sold for arrears, under Act XI of 1859. The purchaser at that sale was sued by the mokuraridar to make good her incumbrance under s. 54 of the Act. The lease was maintained by the decree that followed, but only as to part of the shares specified in the pottahs, and the lessee obtained possession of that part only. In this suit for mesne profits brought by the lessee against the purchaser's heir, who filed a cross suit against her for rent, it was held that, as the lessee had not proved that she, having had possession under the leases, had been dispossessed by the purchaser, there had not been an eviction in the proper sense of the word. But when, in her suit for possession, part only was decreed to her, and she was precluded by the result from getting a substantial part, her position was the same as if she had been evicted. She, therefore, had the same equity for an apportionment, as if she had been evicted. On the facts it was rightly found by the first Court that the leases were not taken with knowledge on the part of the lessee that the title was a doubtful one. In a suit for abatement of rent on the ground that the jumma payable to Government had been reduced upon condition that the rents of the raiyats should be reduced in a like proportion,—Held that the right to abatement applies only to the case of rents of which the amount had been fixed before the jumma was reduced by Government, and not to rents fixed by pottahs or kabuliats entered into subsequently. But where, under such circumstances, the tenant is holding more land than is covered by his pottah, it is not necessary that his landlords, if desirous of enhancing the rent, should be referred to a separate suit for that purpose. The patni was subsequently sold under Regulation VIII of 1819, with notice of the amount of the original rent, and the purchaser now sued for abatement of that rent. He did not allege that he had no notice of the proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. Held that the plaintiff must be presumed to have had notice of these proceedings, and that it was therefore incumbent upon him to have made inquiry regarding the position of the patni, and that under the circumstances he was not entitled to the abatement sought for. In 1881 the defendants sued the plaintiff for rent of a larger amount than the plaintiff admitted to be due, and obtained a decree on the 31st May 1881. On the 20th September 1881, the plaintiff instituted a suit, nominally under the provisions of s. 19 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, for abatement of rent, upon the ground that the defendants were seeking to charge him rent upon a larger amount of land than he actually held. The Court found that the amount of land held by the plaintiff was the amount

While this suit was pending in the Civil Court, the zemindar brought a suit for the rent of two years upon the full jumma; and though the patnidar objected that his suit for abatement was pending, the Collector decreed the rent suit in full. In execution, the zemindar recovered the full rent, and the patnidar then sued for a refund of excess payments and of the interest realized by the zemindar thereon. Held that the decree of the Revenue Court was superseded and modified by the decree of the Civil Court, which was subsequently affirmed in appeal. Held that the plaintiff's cause of action accrued on the date on which the zemindar recovered from him rent in excess of what he was justly liable for and also interest on such excess. Held (on reference to the decree) that the abatement was to take effect from the commencement of the patni lease. 15. ——— As against heir of a deceased wrong-doer—Civil Procedure Code, s. 361 Tort—Malicious prosecution, Suit for—Act XII of 1855—"Actio personalis moritur cum persona," Application of.—The plaintiff sued to recover damages from the defendant's father, R, for wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution. During the pendency of the suit R died, and the plaintiff substituted the defendant as his heir and representative. The defendant contended that the suit abated. Both the lower Courts disallowed the defendant's contention, and awarded damages to the plaintiff, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court,—Held, reversing the decision of the lower Courts, that the suit abated on the death of R, his estate having derived no benefit, but, on the other hand, suffered loss, in consequence of his wrong-doing. It was contended for the plaintiff that Act XII of 1855 gave the plaintiff a right to continue his suit against the heir of R. Held, that Act XII of 1855 did not apply to a suit, such as this, brought originally against the wrong-doer himself, and only subsequently sought to be continued against his heir. *Phillips v. 19. ——— Death of appellant during pendency of appeal—Only one of three legal representatives brought upon the record—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 365—Representative of deceased person.—The words "the legal representative" in s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure must, where there are more than one legal representative, be read in the plural. Hence where a sole appellant died during the pendency of his appeal, leaving three legal representatives, and only one of such legal representatives was brought upon the record in the place of the deceased appellant within the prescribed period of limitation:—Held, that the appeal must abate. Either all the legal representatives of the deceased appellant should have been brought upon the record as appellants, or, if any had refused to be joined as appellants, they should have been brought on as respondents. 20. ——— Appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 366—Application by legal representative to carry on appeal.—The appellant's father having died during the pendency of an appeal lodged by him, a notice was served upon the appellant's two adult brothers; but they having failed to apply within sixty days, the appellant, who was a minor, applied several months afterwards to be put on the record in his deceased father's place as his legal representative, which was done. The Assistant Judge who heard the appeal was of opinion that, in consequence of the omission on the part of the brothers of the appellant to apply, the appeal abated, and he passed an order accordingly. Held, that the application having been made by the minor son within the time limited by law, the order of abatement made by the Judge was wrong. Although the complete legal representation vested in the minor son and his two brothers, s. 366 of the Civil Procedure Code only required an application to be made by a person claiming to be the legal representative, in order to prevent an order of abatement being made. If neither of the brothers was willing to have his name placed on the record, the respondent was entitled to have them made defendants, so that they might be bound by the decree. The minor son could then proceed alone with the appeal. BHIKAJI RAMCHANDRA v. PURSHOTAM . I. L. R., 10 Bom., 220

21. ——— Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 365, 366—Application by representatives to be brought on record—"Legal representative"—Effect of application being made by some only of several legal representatives.—During the pendency of an appeal two persons applied under s. 368 of the Code of Civil Procedure to be brought on the record as legal representatives of the appellant, who had died. In their petition they stated that there were two other persons having interests equal to their own in the representation, who did not join in the application and were not made parties by the applicants for reasons that were given. The applicants were duly placed on the record as representatives of the deceased appellant within the time limited by art. 175A of sch. II of the Limitation Act. After the period of limitation had elapsed, the respondents applied under ss. 366 and 582 of the Code of Civil Procedure for an order that the appeal had abated on the ground that the former petitioners had not added all the persons who had interests equal to their own in the representation. The Subordinate Judge held that the representation of the two applicants was sufficient to prevent the abatement of the appeal, but he made the other two representatives respondents on the record. He subsequently heard and allowed the appeal. On its being contended, on second appeal, that the appeal to the Subordinate Court had abated and should have been dismissed by reason of the non-joinder of the other two representatives:—Held, that though, in art. 175A of sch. II of the Limitation Act, the application is expressed to be an application under s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure and s. 366 is not mentioned, yet for the purpose of considering the question of abatement, the two sections must be read together. When there are more than one legal representative of a deceased appellant, all those representatives must, so far as it is possible for this to be done, join in an application under s. 365 and the words "legal representative" in s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure (and similarly the words "any person" and "the legal representative" in s. 366), strictly construed, must, in such a case, be read in the plural and as including all the legal representatives. But where all the representatives cannot be joined as applicants, ss. 365 and 366 should not be construed so as to have the effect of rendering the application no application by "the legal representative" within the meaning of the sections, so that the appeal must be held to have abated. Bhikaji Ramchandra v. *Purshotam, I. The Judge found the will not proved, and he appointed K to be guardian. G appealed, and pending the appeal she died. G's brother, one M, thereupon applied for leave to prosecute the appeal as G's representative. Held, refusing the application, that the appeal must abate by reason of G's death. Her appointment, alleged to have been made under the will, was a matter of personal preference and trust. A claim based on personal trust could not survive to her representative. Under the circumstances, s. 368 read with s. 582 of the Code applied, and the proper order was to have directed the suit to abate. Held, further, that where the order of the lower Court as to abatement was embodied in the judgment and decree, objection was properly taken thereto by way of second appeal against the decree. Sheo Nath Singh v. *Ram Din Singh, I. While the appeal was pending, the plaintiff died, and, on her application, his widow was made respondent in his place. 1. ——— Corroboration, necessity for.—Setting aside conviction for error in law.—The uncorroborated testimony of one or more accomplice or accomplices is sufficient in law to support a conviction. The evidence of accomplices should not be left to the jury without such directions and observations from the Judge as the circumstances of the case may require, pointing out to them the danger of trusting to such evidence when it is not corroborated by other evidence. The omission to do so is an error in law in the summing up by the Judge, and is, on appeal, a ground for setting aside the conviction, when the Appellate Court thinks that the prisoner has been prejudiced by such omission, and that there has been a failure of justice. intended to lay down as a maxim or rule of evidence that the testimony of an accomplice is unworthy of credit so far as it implicates an accused person, unless it is corroborated in material particulars in respect to that person; and it is the duty of a Court which has to deal with an accomplice's testimony, to consider whether this maxim applies to exclude that testimony or not, and in a case tried by jury to draw the attention of the jury to the principles relative to the reception of an accomplice's testimony. 12. ——— Evidence Act, 1872, ss. 114 and 133.—S. 133 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) in unmistakeable terms lays it down that a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, and to hold that corroboration is necessary is to refuse to give effect to this provision. The rule in s. 114 of the Evidence Act coincides with the rule observed in England, that though the evidence of an accomplice should be carefully scanned and received with caution, and may be treated as unworthy of credit, yet if the jury or the Court credits the evidence, a conviction proceeding upon it is not illegal. 15. ——— Evidence Act, 1872, s. 133.—Per EDGE, C.J.—Although as a general rule it would be most unsafe to convict an accused person on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, such evidence must, like that of any other witness, be considered and weighed by the Judge, who, in doing so, should not overlook the position in which the accomplice at the time of giving his evidence may stand, and the motives which he may have for stating what is false. If the Judge, after making due allowance for these considerations and the probabilities of the story, comes to the conclusion that the evidence of the accomplice, although uncorroborated, is true, and the evidence, if

16. ——————— Evidence of accomplices—Act I of 1872, ss. 114 (b), 133.—The law in India, as expressed in s. 133 and s. 114 of the Evidence Act, and which is in no respect different from the law of England on the subject, is that a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal, that is, it is not unlawful; but experience shows that it is unsafe, and hence it is the practice of the Judges, both in England and in India, when sitting alone, to guard their minds carefully against acting upon such evidence when uncorroborated, and, when trying a case with a jury, to warn the jury that such a course is unsafe There must be some corroboration independent of the accomplice, or of a co-confessing prisoner, to show that the party accused was actually engaged directly in the commission of the crime charged against him. A second accomplice does not improve the position of the first, and, if there are two, it is necessary that both should be corroborated. The accomplice must be corroborated not only as to one but as to all of the persons affected by the evidence, and corroboration of his evidence as to one prisoner does not entitle his evidence against another to be accepted without corroboration. R. v. Webb, 6 C. & P., 595, R. v. Dyke, 8 C. & P., 261, R. v. Addis, 6 C. & P., 388, and R. v. Wilkes, 7 C. & P., 272, referred to. The possession of property taken from a murdered person is not adequate corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice charging such person in possession with participation in the murder, though it would, no doubt, be corroboration of evidence that the prisoner participated in a robbery, or that he had dishonestly received stolen property. In the trial of R, S, and M upon a charge of murder, the evidence for the prosecution consisted of (i) the confession of P, who was jointly tried with them for the same offence; (ii) the evidence of an accomplice; (iii) the evidence of witnesses who deposed to the discovery in R's house of property belonging to the deceased; and (iv) the evidence of witnesses who deposed that, on the day when the deceased was last seen alive, all the prisoners were seen together near the place where the body was afterwards found. Held that there was no sufficient corroboration of the

18. ——————— Compulsion as an excuse for crime—Pretence as evidence of common intention—Fear of instant death—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 34 and 94—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 133—Power of High Court in Revision.—The accused, who were classers employed in the Revenue Survey Department, were charged, under s. 161 of the Penal Code, with taking bribes from the raiyats of certain villages. The only evidence against the accused was that of persons who had either subscribed to the bribes or collected subscriptions or paid the money to the accused. They stated that they had offered the bribes, because the classers had threatened to raise the assessment, cut down the hedges, and erect new boundary-marks. As regards this evidence, the trying Magistrate remarked that, even if all the witnesses for the prosecution were treated as accomplices, it was open to him to convict on their uncorroborated testimony, as "there was inherent truth in their statements, and circumstances existed which negatived the presumption of a conspiracy, and evidenced signs of truthfulness." The Magistrate was also of opinion that there was a distinction between accomplices who volunteered to assist in the receipt of illegal gratifications and those who assisted under compulsion. In the opinion of the Magistrate, the witnesses in the present case belonged to the latter class, and there was no reason to disbelieve their evidence. He, therefore, convicted the accused under s. 161 of the Penal Code, and sentenced them to rigorous imprisonment and fine:—Held (SCOTT, J., dissenting) that the convictions were illegal, there being no evidence to corroborate the witnesses for the prosecution, all of whom were accomplices. Held, also (SCOTT, J., dissenting), that there was such error in the consideration by the Magistrate of the evidence as to prejudice the accused, and such a failure of justice as to justify the Court in revision in setting aside the convictions. Per CURIAM:—The limits of the application of the doctrine of necessity as an excuse for an act otherwise criminal are those prescribed in s. 94 of the Penal Code. Therefore witnesses who, in order to avoid pecuniary injury or personal molestation, had offered or given bribes to a public servant were abettors of the offence of taking an illegal gratification, and their evidence should be treated as that of accomplices. By the law both of India and England the evidence of an accomplice is admissible, and a conviction is not illegal because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice (s. 133 of the Evidence Act, I of 1872). But the presumption that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless corroborated in material particulars, has become a rule of practice of almost universal application. Per SCOTT, J.—There may be, however, cases of an exceptional character in which the accomplice evidence alone convinces a Judge, and if he acts on that conviction, with the character of the witnesses clearly present in his mind, a Revisional Court ought not to interfere, in the absence of other circumstances showing a want of judicial discretion. Per JARDINE, J.—The mere circumstance of a person being present on a lawful occasion does not raise a presumption of that person's complicity in an offence then committed so as to make s. 34 of the Penal Code applicable. Reg. v. Farler, 8 C. & P., 106. Where the Magistrate on that ground did make that presumption against an accused person, and applied the provisions of s. 34, he committed an error in law, and the High Court, as a Court of Revision, might acquit the accused. The Local Government preferred an appeal against his acquittal, and the Magistrate arrested him with a view to his detention in custody until such appeal was determined. While K was so detained, the Magistrate inquired into the charge against B, who had meanwhile been arrested, and made K a witness for the prosecution and committed B for trial. K's evidence was taken on B's trial. Held, per STUART, C.J. (SPANKIE, J., doubting), that K's arrest was lawful, and that his evidence was admissible against B. Held per SPANKIE, J., that, assuming that the Magistrate looked on K as an accused person and his arrest was lawful, the Magistrate should not have examined him as a witness against B, and that, assuming that K's arrest was unlawful, and that, when he made his statements, he was a free man, his evidence, if admissible, was not evidence on which a Court should place much reliance. 21. ——————— Person charged with offence and discharged for want of evidence.—There is no law or principle which prevents a person who has been suspected and charged with an offence, but discharged by the Magistrate for want of evidence, being afterwards admitted as a witness for the prosecution on the ground that he is an accomplice. 22. ——————— Person cognizant of crime taking no means to prevent it.—An accused person cannot be convicted solely upon the evidence of persons who are more or less participators in the crime of which he is accused. Such evidence, being admissible, furnishes as legal a basis for a conviction as any other evidence which is admissible. The omission to follow the established rule of practice as to the corroboration of such evidence does not constitute an error in law; but where the evidence of an accomplice is not of a character to warrant the refusal of a Court to apply to it the maxim enunciated in illustration (b) of s. 114 of the Evidence Act, a conviction based on such evidence alone would be of questionable propriety. Per JARDINE, J.—Ss. 114 and 133 of the Evidence Act are to be read together, and neither section is to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion. The illustration (b) of s. 114—"that the Court may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars"—is, however, the rule, and when it is departed from, the Court should show, or it should appear that the circumstances justify, such departure. Accordingly, where a conviction was based solely on the evidence of accomplices, and the circumstances connected with the preparation and conduct of the case, as disclosed by the record, and portions also of the evidence adduced at the trial, showed that it would not be proper to act on that evidence, the Court set aside the conviction. 2. ——— Cause of action—Evidence of the existing debt—Fresh contract—Interest—Damdupat.— In June 1883, the plaintiff's father advanced a loan to the defendant at compound interest. The account of this debt with interest was adjusted and signed from time to time. In June 1893, it was adjusted and signed, the amount found due being R28-8-0. In February 1896, the plaintiff sued to recover this amount. Held that the account (ruzukhata) was merely an acknowledgment of the debt and of the correctness of the calculation of interest upon it. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to treat the amount so found due as principal and to claim interest upon it. The debt to be sued on was the amount originally advanced, and the interest recoverable was limited by that amount according to the rule of damdupat. By English law an account stated could be sued on as implying a promise to pay. Formerly this was the rule also in Bombay (as shown by the earlier cases), where the account was signed. If, however, it was not signed, it could not be sued on as a new contract. The Indian Limitation Act required an acknowledgment or admission of a debt to be signed; and an admission not made in the manner prescribed by law (i.e., signed) for the purpose of preventing a debt from becoming barred does not imply a promise to pay it if it should become barred. According, however, to the later authorities, an account stated or adjusted (ruzukhata) cannot be sued on as a fresh contract. The suit must be brought in respect of the original transaction, and the subsequent stated or adjusted accounts are only evidence of the debt arising from them, and serve to prevent the operation of the Act of Limitation. The Courts in India found these issues in favour of the widow, and dismissed the suit. The Judicial Committee, in affirming the Court's decrees upon these points, held further that although the estate of the husband was hypothecated for the dower, yet as the heir-at-law would be entitled to the residue after satisfying the widow's claim, he was by right entitled to an account, but as the plaint was so framed as not to admit of an account being taken, the appeal was affirmed, without prejudice to a suit being brought for administration of the deceased's estate upon the footing of the marriage and deed of dower being admitted in the suit. 6. ——— Right to an account—Person with title barred by lapse of time—Hereditary Office, administration of trusts of.—The plaintiff brought a suit to establish his right to and for possession of the hereditary office of dharmakarta of a pagoda and to remove the defendant, but it was held that his title was extinguished by lapse of time. Held that plaintiff, having no longer any title to the property, was not in a position to treat defendant as a trespasser and to call upon him for an account of the past administration of the trust upon that footing; and further, that the suit being substantially one to remove the defendant from the trust and establish plaintiff's title to the hereditary office or, on failure of this, to secure the appointment of a fit and proper person to fill defendant's office, the account was only prayed for on that understanding, and, therefore, the plaintiff was not entitled to call for an account of the past administration of the trust, as a person interested in the religious trust. 7. ——— Landlord and tenant—Rent set off against advances—Suit for rent—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), arts. 85, 89, sch. II—Form of decree.—The plaintiffs executed a lease for nine years in favor of the defendant No. 1 at a fixed annual rent payable by instalments. The defendant, under instructions from the plaintiffs, paid from time to time Government revenue, cesses, expenses of litigation, etc., on their behalf, and used to set off those sums against the rent due to them under the lease; no sum of money by way of advance or otherwise from the plaintiffs ever came into the hands of the defendant. After the expiry of the lease, the plaintiffs instituted this suit against the defendant for an account:—Held that the suit for an account was not maintainable; the relationship between the parties as created by the lease was simply that of landlord and tenant, and the only relief which the plaintiffs could have properly asked for was a decree for rent, if any was still due. 8. ——— Principal and Agent—Method of taking accounts—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 394, 395.—In a suit for an account against an agent, the plaint stated that the defendant had not submitted proper accounts of his agency, and prayed that the defendant might be ordered to produce certain papers, and that, on failure to submit the accounts, he might be decreed to pay the plaintiff R1,200 by way of damages. The plaint also alleged that, in consequence of the defendant's negligence and mismanagement, the plaintiff believed that he had sustained a loss of R5,000, and prayed for a decree for this sum. Held that no decree could be made for the sums mentioned, or any other sum, until an account had been taken and the amount due from the defendant ascertained Method to be followed on taking accounts in the mofussil stated. If the taking of accounts by the Judge would occasion a waste of public time, he should resort to the provisions of ss. 394 and 395 of the Civil Procedure Code, and furnish the Commissioner with such part of the proceedings and such detailed instructions as may appear necessary. 9. ——— Suit by principal for an account—Object of a decree for an account as distinguished from a decree made upon the hearing—Costs.—A continued agency, or employment as dewan, for the purpose of drawing and expending the money of a principal, resulted in a suit by the latter, who alleged that more had been drawn than expended for him, and that a specific sum, or balance, stood against the defendant, having been misappropriated by him. The principal claimed also any further sum that might be proved to be payable. The dewan having denied the receipt of the money and any kind of accountability, it was found against him that the relation of agency existed between the parties. But, on the ground that it was impossible to decide, upon the evidence adduced at the hearing, how much of the principal's money was unaccounted for, though the attempt had been made to prove a balance due, the Appellate Court dismissed the suit:—Held that such a suit was essentially one for an account, and that the Courts below should have followed the regular course, viz., to order an account to be taken of the defendant's dealings with plaintiff's money. This was without any expression of opinion that, in a suit for an account, an issue may not be raised, at the outset, so clearly as to be ready for decision. But the general rule being the other way, this suit was an example of it. HUBRINATH RAI v. KRISHNA KUMAR BAKSHI

IV, form 157—Form of keeping accounts of joint property in mofussil.*—In a suit for an account by a principal against his agent, the plaintiff should ask in his plaint that a proper account may be taken. If the defendant is found liable to render such account for a certain period, the Court should make an interlocutory decree declaring that he is so liable, and direct him to file an account in Court within a fixed period. This decree may be enforced under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed reasonable time to examine it. If the objections are numerous, the procedure prescribed by ss. 394 and 395 and form

When the accounts have been taken, the Court must determine the amount due, and the final decree should be for the payment of this amount, and also, if necessary, for the delivery of any papers, vouchers, or other documents which have come into the hands of the agent in the course of his employment. 11. ——— Fraud or specific error in account, Allegation of.—M sued for an account of all moneys received and paid on his behalf by T, deceased (represented by his widow), and F as his agents from 1st August 1859 to 30th April 1865. It was alleged in the plaint that M "left India in 1858, and has since resided in Scotland; that at the time he left he was, and still is, possessed of extensive property in the Province of Bengal, chiefly landed property;" that T and afterwards T and F were his agents and managers. In his written statement, M stated that "in the month of June 1861, the deceased rendered an account to the plaintiff showing that all moneys due to him by the plaintiff in respect of his salary and commissions up to the 31st January 1861, being the whole of deceased's claim against him up to that date under their above-mentioned arrangements, had been duly paid by the plaintiff. In the month of April 1865, deceased transmitted to the plaintiff the agency accounts of himself and his firm with the plaintiff in continuation of the accounts rendered by him as mentioned in the preceding paragraph, brought down to the end of February 1865; and again in May 1865, the deceased transmitted the continuation of the said account brought down to the 30th April preceding, being the date of the termination of the agency. The said accounts rendered have been examined by the plaintiff, who verily believes that the true balance now due to him thereon exceeds R1,00,000, without including interest." There was no allegation in the plaint, written statement, or opening of counsel, of fraud or specific error. Held that M, in his plaint and written statement, had not disclosed any cause of action. 12. ——— Suit against gomasta—Duty of Court to look into accounts.—In a suit against a gomasta to obtain accounts of moneys which had come into his hands, it was held that it was not enough for the lower Courts to make a decree ordering the defendant to render nikash papers to the plaintiff: it was the business of the Court to have these papers brought before it and examined, and to determine whether they were correct and fair accounts between the parties. 15. ——— Right to re-open settled account—Principles of Court of Equity in re-opening accounts—Principles which regulate a Court of Equity in opening stated and settled accounts.—Accounts of long standing and great complication of a mercantile firm at Calcutta, one of the partners of which afterwards acted as agent in England, involving charges for agency and partnership transactions, were mutually agreed to be investigated and closed. After long negotiations and discussion respecting some of the charges, an agreement was come to, the parties agreeing to strike the general balance at a given sum, reserving one item of the account, amounting to a considerable sum, for future investigation. This reserved item was subsequently settled by the acceptance of a bill of exchange for a lesser amount, as such reserveditem, if re-opened, would have disarranged the settled general account. The bill of exchange was dishonoured and an action brought to recover the amount. A bill was then filed for an injunction for the cancelment of the bill of exchange, and praying that the accounts so settled might be opened. The Supreme Court at Calcutta held that the reserved item being left open was evidence that the account was not finally closed, and decreed the accounts to be opened, referring the cause to the Master. On appeal, held by the Judicial Committee (reversing such decree, and dismissing the bill with costs) that the transaction amounted to an adjustment of the general account between the parties, subject to the reserved item which was subsequently settled, and that the accounts so settled and closed could not, in the absence of fraud, be re-opened. 1. NEW FORMATION OF ALLUVIAL LAND.

(a) GENERALLY.

1. ——— Beng. Reg. XI of 1825.—Bengal Regulation XI of 1825 regards accreted land as the right of that party to whose estate the land is an accretion, and does not divide the accreted land according to the extent of each party's loss by diluvion. The mere fact of a lessee having received a malikana allowance from the Collector during the period of his temporary lease will not bar the right to a permanent settlement of any party who, under the law of alluvion, is entitled to settlement. Whether the accreted lands are capable of identification or not, the clause applies where the lands have been gained by gradual accession by the recession of a river. In the case of gradual accretions, the ordinary rule of acquisition by prescription does not apply, but each accretion as it occurs comes under the same title as that

A fluctuating boundary between zillas does not necessarily affect the rights of landed riparian proprietors. 30. ——— Changes in a river's channel—Rights of riparian owners—Accretion by alluvion distinguished—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 4, cls. 1 and 5.—The current of a river changing its course encroached upon either bank alternately detaching land from one bank, followed by the effect that land was added to the opposite bank. The river having taken a course more to the east than its original one, the area of the defendant's village (till then only partly on the western side, inasmuch as the river traversed it throughout) appeared entirely on the west bank. Some land of the plaintiff's village on the eastern side was also carried away, the river continuing its eastward tendency. By another change, in the opposite direction, the current resumed its original channel more towards the west with the effect that the piece of land that had belonged to the defendant's village, and had been submerged when on the east bank during the above change in the river's course, emerged in the end on its former site on the east bank. This restored land was identifiable. But the owner of the village on the east bank now claimed it as an accretion by alluvion to his property, which it adjoined. Held that the right of property remained in the original owner, the defendant. The owner of the adjoining village on the eastern side could not make out a title to it either under cl. 1, under cl. 5, of s. 4 of Regulation XI of 1825, or

There is no express provision in the Regulation for the case of land which has been lost to the original proprietor by the encroachment of the sea or a river, and which, after diluviation, re-appears on the recession of the sea or river, and there is nothing to take away or destroy the original proprietor's right; such a case is to be determined by the general principles of equity and justice under the 5th rule contained in s. 4. 77. ——— Purchase of land from Government—Right to increments.—Plaintiff bought a certain chur, situated between two branches of a river, from the Government, the sale notification stating that the chur contained a certain area and was subject to a certain jumma. It appeared that at a former time the chur had been much larger and extended over a site afterwards covered with deep water, but on which, and before the plaintiff's purchase, new land had formed by accretion to the opposite side of the channel. In a suit for possession of the newly-formed land on the ground that it was re-formation on an old site,—Held that what the Government sold and what plaintiff bought was the chur as it existed at the date of the purchase. Gunga Narain Chowdhry v. *Radhika Mohun Roy, 21 W. share was sold in execution of a decree and the auction-purchaser was put in possession. In the sale certificate the village M was named, without specific mention of either of the two mehals, and the Government revenue referred to was the amount assessed on U only. Subsequently the river receded, and part of K was again left dry, and it was treated by the revenue authorities as having accreted by alluvion to U, in the proprietary possession of the auction purchaser. Held that this view was erroneous, inasmuch as, before the auction-sale of 20th September 1877, the two properties were separate, being separately assessed with revenue, and the incidents of the ownership of one could not affect the ownership of the other; and since there was no such rule of law as would justify the proposition that simply because two mehals are contiguous, and one of them is liable to be submerged, therefore it is nothing more or less than an accretion to the other. Held also that, inasmuch as the mehal K, being at the time under water, was not attached in execution of the decree against F, and was not advertized for sale, and the revenue assessed thereon was not referred to in the sale-proceedings, and the sale certificate contained no reference to it as the property sold, the sale of the 20th September 1877 did not convey any rights to the auction-purchaser in respect of K. Mahadeo Dubey v. *Bhola Nath Dichit, I. power of Court to question inference from fact in—Omission of the Appellate Court to take into consideration circumstances affecting landlord's acquiescence.—A landlord by merely not objecting to his tenant's raising a pucca building does not confer on the tenant a permanent right to remain on the land. But long possession coupled with the acquiescence of the landlord in the raising of pucca buildings and his continuing to receive rent from the raiyat after such buildings have been raised may justify the inference that a tenant has a permanent right. Zeshwada Bai v. Ram Chandra Takaram, I. L. R., 18 Bom., 66, referred to. But there are circumstances which may go far to weaken the force of that inference, and one of these is the circumstance of the landlord's interest being let out in ijara at the time the building was raised. The absence of objection on the part of the landlord to the erecting of a permanent building by a tenant during the continuance of an ijara of the landlord's interest should not be construed as amounting to acquiescence such as might be inferred where the landlord is in direct receipt of rent from the tenant. Beni Madhub Banerjee v. *Joy Kissen Mookerjee, 12 W. 26. ———— Law of landlord and tenant as to building by the tenant on the land—Acquiescence of lessor—Equitable estoppel preventing ejectment—Onus of proof.—A lessor is not restrained by any rule of equity from bringing a suit to evict a tenant, the term of whose lease has expired, merely by reason of that tenant's having erected permanent structures on the land leased, such building having been within the knowledge of the lessor, and there not having been any interference on his part to prevent it. To raise an equitable estoppel against the lessor precluding him from suing, on the determination of the tenancy, for possession, the tenant should show facts sufficient to justify the legal inference that the lessor has by plain implication contracted that the right of tenancy should be changed into a right of permanent occupancy. Acquiescence by the lessor in this case was a legal inference to be drawn from such facts as were found. The onus of establishing sufficient cause for an equitable estoppel had not been discharged by the tenant in this instance. Ramsden v. Dyson, L. R., 1 E. and I. Ap., 129, and s. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, referred to. BENI RAM v. KUNDAN LAL [I. L. R., 21 All., 496 : L. R., 26 I. A., 58 3 C. W. N., 502

27. ———— Erection of building by tenant—Acquiescence of landlord.—To resist ejectment by a tenant on the ground that the tenancy is a permanent one, and that the landlord stood by and permitted him (the tenant) to erect pucca buildings on the land in the belief that the said tenancy was a permanent one, it is incumbent on the tenant to show that in erecting the buildings he was acting under an honest belief that he had a permanent right in the land, and the landlord, knowing that he (the tenant) was acting under such belief, stood by and allowed him to go on with the construction of the buildings. Beni Ram v. Kundan Lal, I. L. R., 21 All., 496 : L. R., 26 I. A., 58 ; Ramsden v. Dyson, L. R., 1 E. and I. Ap., 129 ; Jug Mohan Das v. Pallonjee, I. L. R., 22 Bom., 1 ; De Busche v. *Alt, L. R., 8 Ch. 28. ———— Delay—Erection of buildings—Laches—Limitation.—The plea of acquiescence is applicable to suits for which a fixed term of limitation is prescribed by law, but mere delay in enforcing a right does not constitute acquiescence. The defendants took possession of, and erected buildings on, land which they knew belonged to the plaintiff and they had no claim to, without applying to the plaintiff for consent. The plaintiff abstained from suing to eject them for one or two years, knowing that the defendants were building on the land,—Held, under the circumstances, that the delay in the institution of the suit was not sufficient to deprive the plaintiff of her right to relief. UDA BEGUM v. IMAM-UD-DIN . I. L. R., 1 All., 82

29. ———— Standing by and seeing building erected—Right to removal.—In a case in which plaintiffs sought to recover possession of some land on which defendants had constructed a pucca house and in which defendants pleaded that they had purchased a building right from a third party with whom plaintiffs had settled the land, and that plaintiffs had seen them building the house in

30. ——— Absence of protest—Suit for removal of building—Obstruction to right-of-way.—In a suit for the removal of a building which the defendants had erected, and which was an obstruction to the plaintiffs' right to use a courtyard adjoining their residences, it appeared that the land on which the building stood did not belong to either party, but that all the inhabitants of the mohulla had from time immemorial exercised a right-of-way over it to and from their houses:—Held that there was no principle of acquiescence involved in the case, inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiffs had given their actual consent to the building, and the only evidence of their acquiescence could be that they did not immediately protest, and the defendants must have known that they were building upon a courtyard which their neighbours had a right to use. Uda Begum v. *Imam-ud-din, I. 31. ——— Cultivating land without objection—Acquiescence—Owner standing by and seeing person without title cultivate land—Fraud and deceit.—In order to prevent the owner of land who is charged with standing by and allowing another person, who believes he has a good title thereto, to enter on the land and spend money in improving it, from recovering possession thereof, fraud and deceit on the part of the owner must be clearly proved. Dann v. Spurrier, 7 Vesey, 251, and Rama v. *Jan Mahomed, 3 B. 32. ——— Cultivation and changing character of land—Landlord and tenant—Injunction—Delay.—The tenant of an agricultural holding planted his jote with mango trees to the knowledge, but without the consent, of his landlord, thus changing the character of the land. More than three years afterwards the landlord sued for a mandatory injunction to have the mango trees removed. Held that, having stood by for more than three years and allowed the tenant to spend his labour and capital upon the land without taking any action in the matter, the landlord was not entitled to a mandatory injunction. 33. ——— Malabar kanam—Change in character of land—Passive acquiescence of landlord—Estoppel—Compensation for improvements by tenant.—Land was demised on kanam wet for cultivation. The demisee changed the character of the holding by making various improvements which were held to be inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was demised. On a finding that the landlord had stood by while the character of the holding was being changed and had thereby caused a belief that

35. ——— Conduct defeating title—Evidence of ratification.—The plaintiff, a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued to recover a parcel of land which he alleged his uncle, the first defendant, to have wrongly transferred to the second defendant. The second defendant alleged a sale to him by the first defendant, and a subsequent sale to the third defendant, and denied the plaintiff's title. The Munsif gave a decree for the plaintiff; on appeal, the Principal Sudder Amin, finding that the plaintiff knew of the sale and treating the knowledge as evidence of acquiescence in it, reversed the decision of the Munsif. Held, reversing the decision of the Principal Sudder Amin, that such knowledge would not make the plaintiff a party to the sale by the first defendant, so as to bar his right to recover the land for which he sued in ejectment. A person who seeks to bar one who is primâ facie the legal owner, by evidence of ratification, or of facts cogent enough to prove one not a formal to be a substantial party, must make and prove such a case, for he is one who seeks to displace a legal title. 36. ——— Ratification of transfer of property.—A solehnama in 1847, to which were parties the sons, daughters, and widow of a deceased Mahomedan proprietor, transferred the shares of two minor daughters in their father's estate, having been executed by their mother, the widow, on their behalf. On the question whether the solehnama should be set aside, at the instance of the two daughters, on the ground of its having been beyond their mother's power to bind them, and of the instruments having been prejudicial to their interests, the evidence showed that it had been acted on and followed by possession, and that the daughters had, after attaining full age, allowed a lengthened period of twenty years to elapse without taking proceedings to dispute it:—Held that, if the mother had exceeded her powers in executing the solehnama on their behalf, and if they might, at one time, have had it set aside, their long acquiescence was sufficient to show ratification of the transaction; and the solehnama was

37. ——— Presumption from allowing grant of certificate unopposed.—In a rival claim between two Hindu widows of a deceased husband the plaintiff sued as mother and guardian of her infant son to establish his right as son and heir of his father. One defence among others was that the son was not legitimate, and could not inherit. His legitimacy was established, but the incapacity to inherit was sought to be proved by the plaintiff's virtual acknowledgment of the defendant's title as heiress on the grant to the defendant unopposed by the plaintiff of a certificate of heirship. Held that it was not the practice of the Courts in India or of the Privy Council to press against either an infant or a Hindu female a presumption by acquiescence in a rival claim from the mere non-contestation for a limited time of an adverse title. 38. ——— Not objecting to sale—Suit to recover property sold—Presumption of consent.—Where R K, acting ostensibly as recognized agent and manager of the family, sold part of the family property to the ancestors of the defendants, and the plaintiff, who was then of age, did not object to the sale, but afterwards sued to set aside the sale as to his share, on the ground that the property had been purchased by R K with the joint funds while the plaintiff was a minor, and that it was sold by him without authority, the first Court gave him a decree for a one-fourth share of the property. R K appealed, but the other defendants did not appeal. The Judge, assuming the lower Court's finding to be correct, held that, as the plaintiff, who was of age at the time, did not object to the sale, he could not recover possession of property sold by R K as the recognized agent and manager. Held that R K could not found any right upon the presumption of plaintiff's consent, however such presumption might have availed the other defendants, purchasers from R K, who had not appealed. 41. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 443—Suit against a major defendant by guardian ad litem*—Subsequent objection to execution on ground of his having been wrongly impleaded.*—The managing member of a Hindu family consisting of himself and two brothers, who were minors, mortgaged the ancestral property to secure a debt properly incurred by him in his capacity as manager. The mortgagee brought a suit upon the mortgage joining as defendants the three brothers, the two younger of whom were sued by the mortgagor as their guardian ad litem. A decree for the plaintiff having been passed, the lands were sold in execution. The two younger brothers now sued to have the decree and the sale set aside as regards them, on the ground that they had both been of age at the date of the suit, and accordingly had been wrongly impleaded. It appeared that the elder plaintiff was in fact a major at the date of the previous suit, but he was aware, prior to the sale, of the suit and the execution proceedings, and still allowed his elder brother to conduct the defence and proceedings on his behalf:—Held that both plaintiffs were bound by the decree in the former suit. 42. ——— Sending agent to settle rent—Acquiescence in rate.—The sending of an agent by a tenant to settle with the landlord as to the rent is not a virtual acquiescence in the rate of rent demanded. STALKART v. LALLA BHUBRUT LALL . . . W. R., 1864, Act X, 115

43. ——— Receipt of rent in lieu of grant of land.—In a suit to recover possession of land it appeared that the defendant's father had in 1801 obtained possession on a lease of 280 bighas from the Government of Kulabo, and that the plaintiffs' father had in 1806 obtained a grant of 10 unspecified bighas of the same land, but that he never asked to have them marked out and given to him in specie, and that he, and subsequently his sons, the plaintiffs, were content up to the year 1856 to receive from the defendant's family in respect of their grant the rent formerly paid by them to the Government for the same. The District Court reversed the decree of the Munsif, and threw out the claim to recover possession of the land on the ground that the plaintiffs must be taken after such a lapse of time to have acquiesced in the arrangement that a yearly rent was to be received without any particular land being marked out as theirs. Held that it was competent for the Assistant Judge to come to that conclusion under the circumstances, and that there was no ground for saying that there was any error of law in his decision, which was accordingly affirmed. 2. ——— Right of Suit—Effect of an order for additional assessment.—Certain land, which formed part of the plaintiff's zamindari, became, on its re-formation after submergence by a change in the course of the river Ganges, attached to the zamindari of J, and it being found so attached, an additional jumma was, after proceedings taken by the revenue authorities under Act IX of 1847, assessed against J in respect of it. In a suit in the Civil Court brought by the plaintiff against the Government, J, and L, an ijaradar under J, to recover possession of the land,—Held that the suit was not barred by the proceedings under Act IX of 1847. S. 6 of that Act makes the orders passed under its provisions final only against the zemindar, not against third persons. Nor would s. 9 bar the suit; the words of that section do not necessarily extend to forbidding a suit brought to recover property which the Government or its officers may be instrumental in keeping away from the rightful owner. Held, on the facts, that the Government had not, by the proceedings under Act IX of 1847, or otherwise, interfered with the plaintiff's rights so as to entitle him to relief against it in the present suit. COLLECTOR OF MOORSHEDABAD v. ROY DHUNPUT SINGH BAHADOOR . . 15 B. L. R., 49: 23 W. R., 38

3. ——— Settlement by Revenue authorities.—Although a settlement made by the Revenue authorities under Act IX of 1847 is final, the fact of such settlement will not preclude a proprietor from seeking in a Civil Court to establish his right to the lands so settled. NARAIN CHUNDER v. TAYLER I. L. R., 4 Calc., 103: 3 C. L. R., 151

5. ——— Right of assessment by Government of accreted lands—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825.—Act IX of 1847 refers to re-surveys of zamindari lands which the Government as such may cause to be made at certain intervals, and to assessment consequent on the changes ascertained by such re-surveys, but does not interfere with the rights of the Government, in its capacity of zamindar, to take possession of, and assess all accretions to, its own estates under Regulation XI of 1825. OBHOY CHUREN CHOWDHEY v. COLLECTOR OF DACCA 4 W. R., 59

6. ——— Land added to revenue-paying estate.—The words "land has been added to any estate paying revenue directly to Government" in Act IX of 1847, s. 6, mean added to the estate as it is depicted on the survey map. RAM JEWAN SINGH v. COLLECTOR OF SHAHABAD

7. ——— ss. 6, 9—Assessment of accreted land—Order of Board of Revenue when final under s. 6 of Act IX of 1847.—The effect of the words "whose order thereupon shall be final" in s. 6 of Act IX of 1847 is, that where an assessment has been made under s. 6, which has been approved by the Board of Revenue, such assessment is final and cannot be called in question in a civil suit; but the fact of an assessment having been made is no bar to a suit raising the question whether the Board of Revenue had jurisdiction under s. 6 of the Act to assess. Act IX of 1847 applies to land reformed on the site of a permanently-settled estate. SARAT SUNDARI DABI v. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL . I. L. R., 11 Calc., 784

8. ——— Assessment of reformed land after diluviation—Act IX of 1847, ss. 1, 6, 7, and 9, Effect of—Jurisdiction of Board of Revenue, its extent—Civil Court, Power of—Survey maps, their evidentiary value.—Where on inspection of a survey map, and after its comparison with a former thak map, the Board of Revenue assessed certain land as alluvial increment, which, however, the Civil Court, in a suit against the order of the Board, found upon further evidence to be a re-formation on the original site of a permanently-settled estate, in respect whereof the plaintiff had all along paid revenue without abatement:—Held that the land was not liable to fresh assessment under the provisions of s. 6 of Act IX of 1847, nor was the comparison of the two maps by the Revenue Officer conclusive on the question of addition to the estate. Sarat Sundari Debi v. The Secretary of State, I. L. R., 11 Calc., 784, partially overruled.—Held also (MITTER, J., dissenting) that the order of the Board of Revenue fixing the land with liability to assessment was not final, and could be set aside by the Civil Court as ultra vires. Dewan Ram Jewan Singh v. The Collector of Shahabad, 18 W. R., 64, Ram Jewan Singh v. The Collector of Shahabad, 19 W. R., 127, overruled. Held, by the majority of the Full Bench, that the language of s. 9 was not such as would prohibit the present suit; and, unless the meaning were clear, its operation should be limited to suits for damages on account of anything done in good faith; for instance, in a case of ouster under s. 7. The Collector of Moorshedabad v. Roy Dhunput Singh, 15 B. L. R., 49, approved. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting), s. 1 of Act IX of 1847 repealed everything in the Regulations which enacted by what officers and how the question of liability to assessment should be tried, and therefore took away from Collectors and Boards of Revenue the power of giving any binding decision on the point. Held also (MITTER, J., dissenting) that the effect of the words "shall be final" in s. 6 was to make the assessment final in every case in which there was jurisdiction to assess, but to leave it open to the Civil Courts to inquire in each case whether there was such jurisdiction, or whether the lands assessed were liable to assessment. Per MITTER, J.—S. 1 has not abolished the judicial functions of the Revenue authorities under Regulation II of 1819; all that has been abolished by that section are the tribunals constituted by Regulation III of 1828. Per MITTER, J.—The proceedings of the Revenue authorities under s. 6 embrace an inquiry upon two questions, viz., the question of the liability to assessment, and the rate of assessment, and under the express wording of the section the finality attaches to the whole order of the Sudder Board of Revenue. FAHAMIDANNISSA BEGUM v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL

——— Held, on appeal to the Privy Council—A review of the legislation anterior to Act IX of 1847 shows that whilst it was intended to bring under assessment lands not included in the permanent settlement, whether waste or gained by alluvion or dereliction from sea or rivers, yet all such lands as were comprised in permanently-settled estates were to be rigorously excluded from further assessment. Lands included in the permanent settlement having afterwards been covered by water, and having then been formed again on the same site, held not to be lands "gained" from the river by alluvion or dereliction within the meaning of Regulation II of 1819, that expression being confined to meaning lands gained since the period of the settlement. The effect of Act IX of 1847 was merely to change the mode of assessment in the case of land already liable to be assessed under legislation in force when that Act became law. It was not the object of that Act to bring under liability land re-formed on the site of land previously lost, within the area of a permanently-settled estate, the revenue upon which had been paid without abatement since the permanent settlement. Where an order of the Board of Revenue, purporting to be made under Act IX of 1847, subjected land included in the permanent settlement to assessment,—Held that the District Civil Court had jurisdiction (which, therefore, might be invoked as a matter of right) to entertain a suit brought by the landowner contesting that order, and to declare it unauthorised by law. 1. ——— Award—Decision on non-appearance of parties.—Act XIII of 1848 "for the greater security of possessory titles in the Presidency of Bengal, derived from awards made by the revenue authorities under Regulation VII of 1822, Regulation IX of 1825, and Regulation IX of 1833 of the Bengal Code," by s. 3, enacted that no suit should be entertained for contesting the justice of any award of the revenue authorities under any of these Regulations made after the passing of the Act after the expiration of three years from the date of the final award. A suit for the amendment of a map was referred by the Deputy Collector to an Ameen for the purpose of a local investigation, and the Ameen returned that, neither of the parties appearing before him, he was unable to make the investigation, whereupon the Deputy Collector struck the case out. Held that this was not an award within the meaning of the Act. 3. ——— Suit to assess land—Boundary suit.—Act XIII of 1848 did not apply to bar a suit to assess land as rent-paying. 4. ——— Awards made by Collectors—Beng. Regs. VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833.—Act XIII of 1848 was limited to awards made by Collectors under Bengal Regulations VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833, which gave to the revenue authorities judicial power to determine questions of possession and other matters with a right of appeal to the regular Courts against their awards. An order of the Collector for the mutation of names in the register is not an award of the nature contemplated by the Regulation XIII of 1848, and an appeal from it was not subject to the limitation of three years prescribed thereby. 2. ——— Hindu and Mahomedan Law.—There is no indication whatever in Act XL of 1858 of any intention to alter or affect any provision of Hindu or Mahomedan law as to guardians who do not avail themselves of the Act. The scope of the enactment is merely to remove legislative prohibitions, to confer expressly a certain jurisdiction, and to define exactly the position of those who avail themselves of, or are brought under, the Act, leaving persons to whom any existing rules of law apply unaffected. Therefore, where an application for a certificate was made in 1877, and an order granting it was passed in December 1879, but the certificate was not issued until December 1881, —Held that the minor, in respect of whose property the certificate was applied for, who had between the date of the application and the issue of the certificate attained the age of 18 years, and signed a promissory note, was not entitled to take advantage of s. 3 of the Majority Act, 1875, and set up the plea of minority as a defence to a suit on the note. 6. ——— Period from which authority of guardian dates—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 6.—S. 6 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), which says that a certificate under Act XL of 1858 (among other documents) "shall not be filed, exhibited, or recorded in any Court of Justice or received or furnished by any public officer," unless a certain fee be paid, means that such certificate cannot come into existence until the person who has the permission of the Court to obtain it deposits the requisite amount of stamp duty. Independently of this section, however, the preparation of such a certificate after the order granting it is not a purely ministerial act; it must then be applied for by the grantee: and it is from the date of the certificate being actually taken out, and not from the date of the order granting it, that a guardian of the person and property of a minor is to be considered as appointed under Act XL of 1858. Where, therefore, on a petition for such a certificate by J, an order was made that the "application be allowed," and in a suit on certain bonds, in which suit the minor in respect of whose person and property the petition for a certificate was made was a defendant, he was represented by J, by whom no certificate had been actually taken out.—Held, in a suit by the minor to set aside the decree as not binding on him, that without the certificate J had no authority to appear on behalf of the minor, and the latter, not having been properly represented in the suit brought against him, was entitled to have the decree set aside. Stephen v. Stephen, I. L. R., 8 Calc., 714, and on appeal, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 901, followed. Chunee Mul Johary v. Brojonath Roy Chowdhry, I. L. R., 8 Calc., 967, dissented from. SAHAI NAND v. MUNGNIRAM MARWARI . I. L. R., 12 Calc., 542

Held, however, on appeal by the Privy Council reversing the above decision, that, when a Court to which application has been made under s. 3 of Act XL of 1858 for a certificate has adjudged the applicant entitled to have one, he then substantially obtains it, although it may not be drawn up or issued at the time. Having obtained such an order, he has in substance complied with the terms of the Act, in the same way as when a plaintiff has judgment that he shall have a decree in his suit, it may be said that he has then obtained his decree. Therefore, when a minor had been represented in a suit by a person who had obtained an order for a certificate under s. 3, but had not had it issued to him, the absence of a certificate was held to be not such an irregularity as entitled the minor, on coming of age, to have the proceedings set aside on the ground that he had not been properly represented. 8. ——— Appointment of guardian without proof of certificate being taken out—Presumption as to regularity of proceedings—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, illus. (e).—In a suit by a puisne mortgagee against the prior as well as the subsequent mortgagees and the mortgagor's representative it was found that the prior mortgages were executed when the mortgagor was over 18, but under 21. A guardian of his person had been appointed under Act XL of 1858, but there was no evidence as to whether a certificate of administration had also been granted under that Act. The prior mortgagees thereupon contended that under Act XL of 1858 a guardian of the person could not be appointed unless a certificate of administration was also granted, and there being no evidence of the latter being granted, this appointment of a guardian of the person alone was ultra vires. Held that, assuming (but without deciding the point) that under Act XL of 1858 a guardian of the person could not be appointed unless a certificate of administration was also granted, an independent appointment of a guardian of the person may be made, and there being no

8. ——— Purchaser from guardian.—Per GARTH, C.J.—Previously to the passing of Act XL of 1858, where a suit was brought by a minor on coming of age, to recover property sold by his guardian during his minority, it was generally incumbent upon the purchaser to prove that he acted in good faith; that he made proper enquiries as to the necessity for the sale; and had honestly satisfied himself of the existence of that necessity. Now under s. 18 of that Act, the Civil Court not only has the power, but is bound to enquire into the circumstances of each case, and to determine whether, as a matter of law and prudence, it is right that any proposed sale or mortgage of the minor's property should take place; and if the Court, upon the materials and information brought before it by the guardian, makes an order for sale, a purchaser under such an order is not bound to make the same enquiry which the Judge has made, and to determine for himself whether the Judge has done his duty properly and come to a right conclusion. Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under s. 18, the onus lies upon him to make out a primâ facie case of fraud or illegality, and to show that the debt, which formed the consideration for the sale in such case, was one for which the minor was not responsible. Per PRINSEP, J.—A stranger purchasing from a guardian, acting under the authority granted under s. 18 of Act XL of 1858, will be entitled to every protection from the Courts, so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied, were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case would lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor, and therefore is the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser, when the plaintiff has established a primâ facie case. 10. ——— Guardian and minor—Mortgage by certificated guardian without sanction of District Court—Mortgage money applied partly to benefit of minor's estate—Suit by minor to set aside the mortgage—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 65.—S. 18 of the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1858) does not imply that a sale or mortgage or a lease for more than five years, executed by a certificated guardian without sanction of the Civil Court, is illegal and void ab initio; but the proviso means that in the absence of such sanction the certificated guardian, who otherwise would have all the powers which the minor would have if he were of age, shall be relegated to the position which he would occupy if he had been granted no certificate at all. If any one chooses to take a mortgage or a lease for a term exceeding five years under these circumstances, the transaction is on the basis of no certificate having been granted. In a suit brought by the guardian of a Mahomedan minor for a declaration that a mortgage deed executed by the minor's mother was null and void to the extent of the minor's share and for partition and possession of such share, it was found that a considerable proportion of the moneys received by the mortgagor had been applied for the benefit of the minor's estate by discharging incumbrances imposed on it by his deceased father. It appeared that at the time of the mortgage, the mother held a certificate of guardianship under the Bengal Minors Act, and that she had not obtained from the Civil Court any order sanctioning the mortgage under s. 18 of that Act:—Held that the omission to obtain such sanction did not make the mortgage illegal or void ab initio, but relegated the parties to the position in which they would have been if no certificate had been granted, i.e., that of a transaction by a Mahomedan mother affecting to mortgage the property of her minor son, with whose estate she had no power to interfere. Held that this fell within the class of cases in which it has been decided that if a person sells or mortgages another's property, having no legal or equitable right to do so, and that other benefits by the transaction, the latter cannot have it set aside without making restitution to the person whose money has been applied for the benefit of the estate. Held that, even if mortgages executed by a certificated guardian without the sanction required by s. 18 of the Bengal Minors Act were void, the section did not make them illegal; and, with reference to s. 65 of the Contract Act, the plaintiff could not obtain a decree for a declaration that the mortgage was inoperative as against his share, except on condition of his making restitution to the extent of any moneys advanced by the defendant under the mortgage-deed which had gone to the

He is, it seems, subject to removal upon summary application under Act XL of 1858, s. 21; but if the ground upon which his removal is applied for involves an investigation of accounts, such investigation must be made in a regular suit under s. 19, previous to such summary application under s. 21. S. 5 of the said Act applies to estates which are under attachment issued under Act VIII of 1859, and which are in the hands of a manager appointed on the application of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of liquidating the debts. Such attachments are not superseded by the appointment of such manager. The words "arrears of estates under attachment" apply to cases where a portion only of an estate is under attachment, as well as to cases in which the whole estate has been attached. The interference of the Magistrate under the Act is limited to cases where the neglect or refusal to perform is wilful and without lawful and reasonable excuse. It appeared that such money was advanced by way of loan, and without any reference to the wages of such workmen or the payment for the work performed by them, and that no deduction on account of such advance was ever made from their wages or the payments made to them. Held that the contract between the parties was something quite different from any contract contemplated by Act XIII of 1859, and that Act was therefore not applicable. Held, also, that it was doubtful whether that Act applied locally, as it was not shown that the city of Mirzapur was comprised within the "station" of Mirzapur. 5. ——— Suit to compel heir of manager to make good deficiency—Leave of Court.—Act XX of 1863 does not apply to a suit brought by the dharmakarta of a temple and one of its worshippers to compel the defendant, as heir of the late manager, to make good, out of the property inherited by him, the deficiency in the devasthanam funds caused by breach of trust and misappropriation by the late manager. The leave of the Civil Court for the institution of such a suit is not necessary, and the suit is maintainable. The right of instituting such suits is not a privilege accorded by Act XX of 1863, but a pre-existing right. JEYANGARULAVARU v. DURMA DOSSJI . . . 4 Mad., 2

6. ——— Suit to eject Dharmakarta or agents from temple—Right of Government to divest itself of power of interfering with appointment—Mad. Reg. VII of 1817.—Plaintiffs, members of the committee appointed under Act XX of 1863, sued to eject defendants (the dharmakarta and his agents) from the possession and management of the temple dedicated to Sri Viraraghava Swami at Trivellore and to establish their (plaintiffs') right to the possession and control of the said temple. Defendants denied the right of the plaintiffs to exercise any control whatever over the temple. This right depended upon whether, at the period of the passing of Act XX of 1863, the nomination vested in, was exercised by, or was subject to the confirmation of, the Government, or any public officer. It was admitted that in 1842 the Board of Revenue did, so far as it could, divest itself of all right to interfere with the appointment of a dharmakarta, but it was contended for the plaintiffs that it was not in the power of the Board of Revenue so to divest itself of the duties imposed upon it by Regulation VII of 1817. Held that, assuming the Board of Revenue

If it is not so exercised, the power may be controlled by a Civil Court of original jurisdiction. DAVUD SAIBA v. HUSSEIN SAIBA . . I. L. R., 17 Mad., 212

9. ——— Duties and Powers of committee of management—Meetings of committee—Number of members present—Resolution appointing quorum—Resolution by three out of seven—Failure of trustee to submit accounts—Ground for dismissal.—Though committees constituted under the Religious Endowments Act, 1863, are not strictly corporations, their procedure in matters relating to the management of properties and trustees under their control should be governed by the rules applicable to regular corporations. In 1879, when a committee consisted of seven members, a meeting was held at which five were present, and a resolution was unanimously passed that at future meetings three should form a quorum. This resolution had never been rescinded, and had always been acted upon. In 1895, when the committee also consisted of seven, a meeting was held after due notice to all its members, at which three were present, and a trustee of the temple was, on valid grounds, dismissed from office and called upon to hand over charge of the temple and its properties. The resolution of dismissal was unanimous, and was confirmed at a subsequent meeting:—Held that the meeting as constituted was competent to pass the resolution removing the trustee. Whether unanimity of the whole committee might not have been necessary in the event of business having been transacted otherwise than at a meeting: Quære. —Failure on the part of a trustee to submit accounts to the committee is a breach of one of the most important duties cast upon him by law, and is sufficient to justify his dismissal. On its appearing that the defendants' ancestor was not the founder of the temple, but was appointed trustee by the Government, as also were his successors in the office of trustee, of whom all were not members of his family:—Held (1) the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree declaring the temple in dispute to be of the class mentioned in Act XX of 1863, s. 3, and, as such, subject to their jurisdiction; (2) the plaintiffs were not entitled under Act XX of 1863, ss. 14, 1, and 12, to be put in possession of the property of the temple nor in receipt of its income. The Civil Judge found that the grant was for the performance of religious ceremonies and pious observances only, and that the plaintiff had led a vicious life and been guilty of malversation in his office, and, being of opinion that the plaintiff had been properly deprived of the lands belonging to the muth, under Madras Regulation VII of 1817, dismissed the suit. Held that, under s. 4 of Act XX of 1863, the plaintiff became entitled, on the passing of the Act, to the restoration of the endowment. There was a practice on the part of the proprietors and the managers of the institution to divide among themselves the residue of the income and to dispose by way of sale or mortgage of the share enjoyed by them. Held that this was a religious institution within the meaning of Act XX of 1863. 4. ——— Suit to restrain manager from allowing property to be removed—Form of order—Injunction—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 30.—S. 14 of Act XX of 1863 is generally applicable to all religious endowments, and while it in one sense restrains the ordinary Courts from dealing with cases against trustees of religious endowments, it gives special facilities for suits in the principal Civil Court of the district by any of the persons interested in those endowments. Quære—Whether, considering the provisions of s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code, the retention of s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 is at all necessary? An order under s. 14, Act XX of 1863, should be mandatory, and not prohibitory. Where a sacred book was kept at a temple, and was an object of veneration to the members of the sect entitled to worship there:—Held that a suit would lie under s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 by some of the persons interested in the temple, to restrain the superintendent from removing the book to another place, and that he should be directed to retain it as a portion of the furniture of the temple. 7. ——— Suit to recover land on behalf of temple.—The provisions of s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 (Religious Endowments Act) do not oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts except in the cases specified therein. A suit for recovery of immoveable property on behalf of a temple, alleging by way of misfeasance and breach of trust that the defendants (the managers of the temple) had forged documents and usurped temple property, without any prayer for the removal of the managers, or for damages, or for a decree for specific performance of any act by the managers, is not a suit for which a special jurisdiction is provided by the Act. 8. ——— Suit by persons interested for breach of trust and neglect of duty—Refusal of trustee without adequate reason to accept and utilise offerings for celebration of festivals—Misfeasance and breach of trust in s. 14 explained.—In a suit against the trustee of a religious institution under Act XX of 1863 for alleged breaches of trust and neglect of duty by reason of the non-performance of ceremonies, it is not necessary, in order to give jurisdiction to Civil Courts, for the plaintiffs to show that there are any special funds constituting an endowment of the institution. If it be proved that the ceremonies in question have been conducted as a custom for a series of years, and that the defendant trustee was not absolutely unable, owing to lack of funds, to carry on those ceremonial observances in the customary manner, he must be held to have been guilty of neglect of duty rendering him liable to a suit under s. 14 of the Act. Where it has been usual for the trustee to celebrate festivals with the aid of voluntary contributions, it is a breach of duty on the part of the trustee to refuse to celebrate them without adequate reasons if funds are available, and the trustee ought not, contrary to usage, to refuse to receive such offerings and perform the ceremonies for which they are tendered. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J.—Having regard to the fact that funds voluntarily given to public religious institutions not only enrich the institutions, but promote the interests of public worship, it must be regarded as part of the proper functions of the trustee to utilise such income for the purposes of the institution whenever it is available. It is his duty to accept the money and apply it for the specified purpose unless there are proper grounds for its rejection. Though a trustee may exercise a discretion and cannot be charged with misconduct, if he acts with an absence of indirect motive, with honesty of intention and a fair consideration of the subject, he may be proceeded against if, from corrupt or improper motives, he refuses to allow voluntary contributions offered for purposes not inconsistent with the principles, rules, or usages of the institution to be applied to those purposes. The Courts are bound to restrain a trustee from injuring the interests of the institution under his charge by corruptly, arbitrarily, or wantonly departing from the ordinary course of procedure in regard to essential or important matters connected with the institution. The ground upon which the Courts exercise such jurisdiction over him is that such departure on his part amounts to a breach of legal duty incumbent on him. Though the Courts cannot be called upon to decide questions of ritual and worship unconnected with civil rights, it is perfectly competent for them to adjudicate upon such questions also when the adjudication is necessary for the determination of civil rights. Amin Sahib v. Ibram Sahib, 4 Mad., 112, explained. And such persons are those to whom the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1810 were applicable. Two plaintiffs, members of a

Hindu family, applied for and (in the presence of the defendants) obtained leave to institute a suit against the defendants, who were the shebaits of a certain idol, for the purpose of having them removed from their office, on the ground of misconduct. In their plaint they alleged that the endowment was a public one, all Hindus having a common right of worshipping the idol. This was denied by the defendants. After issues had been framed, the Court of first instance made an order, under s. 16 of the Act, referring certain of them to arbitration, although the defendants contended that, as the endowment was not a public one, the Act had no application, and objected to the reference. The arbitrators made an award finding, inter alia, that the idol was the ancestral family idol of the parties to the suit, and that the endowment was not made for the benefit of the public. They further in their award laid down certain definite rules according to which the sheba ought to be conducted, and repairs to the temple made. The Court of first instance passed a decree on that award declaring that the idol was the ancestral idol of both parties, and directing that the defendants should perform the worship in a certain manner, and should execute certain repairs to the temple within six months, and declaring that, if the parties did not act as directed, any member of the family should be able to bring a suit for the appointment of a manager. Against that decree the defendants appealed, and contended that the Act did not apply to the case on the finding of facts as to the endowment not being a public one; that the compulsory reference to arbitration was illegal and void, and that the decree was not one authorised by the terms of s. 14 of the Act:—Held that, on the facts as found by the arbitrators, Act XX of 1863 did not apply to the case, and that the compulsory reference to arbitration and the decree made thereon were illegal and void. Held, further, that the decree itself was bad on the ground that it was not one coming within the scope of s. 14 of the Act PROTAP CHANDRA MISSER v. BROJONATH MISSER

17. ——— Suspension and dismissal of trustee of a temple—Powers of temple committee.—The plaintiff was appointed to the office of trustee of a Hindu temple under Religious Endowments Act, 1863, s. 3, by the temple committee constituted under that Act. Subsequently the committee, having received certain complaints against him, suspended him from office pending inquiry without calling on him for an explanation. They alleged as the grounds of his suspension that he had caused loss of property and money to the temple, and that he had conducted things in the temple contrary to custom so as to cause a disturbance of the peace. The trustee refused to acquiesce in the order of suspension and to give up certain records, etc., which he was by that order required to deliver, and denied the authority of the committee as asserted by them. Shortly afterwards the committee dismissed him. The plaintiff, denying that his suspension and dismissal were legal, brought two suits against the members of the committee, the first for damages for the suspension, and the second for an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with the discharge of his duties as trustee. Both of these suits were dismissed, and the plaintiff preferred appeals to the High Court. In the appeal relating to the claim for an injunction, it was found that no misconduct had been proved against the plaintiff previous to the order of suspension. Held by SHEPHARD and DAVIES, JJ., that a trustee in the position of the plaintiff cannot be dismissed from office except for good cause shown, and that his conduct subsequent to the order of suspension did not amount to such good cause. In the appeal relating to damages:—Held by SHEPHARD, J., that the order of suspension was illegal, and that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages. Held by DAVIES, J. (finding that the committee had proceeded in the bond fide belief that they were acting for the good of the temple in suspending the plaintiff pending inquiry), that the order of suspension was not illegal, and that the suit was rightly dismissed. Owing to the difference of opinion between the two Judges, the last-mentioned appeal was referred to the Chief Justice under Civil Procedure Code, s. 575, and was heard by him sitting with the two other Judges:—Held by COLLINS, C.J., and SHEPHARD, J. (DAVIES, J., diss.), that the order of suspension was illegal, and the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages. Per COLLINS, C.J.—The power of suspension by the committee is, in my judgment, the same as the power of dismissal. The committee, having made due inquiry and having called on the trustee for an explanation, may suspend for good and sufficient cause, but not otherwise. SESHADRI AYYANGAR v. NATARAJA AYYAR . I. L. 1. ——— s. 18—Leave to sue—*Public and private endowments—Reg. By the wakfnama she constituted herself joint-mutwalli with one B, and caused the names of herself and B as mutwallis to be substituted in the Collector's register for her own name as owner. On the death of B, A acted as the sole mutwalli. The wakfnama was publicly registered. But though the property was styled "wakf," and A the mutwalli thereof, in all documents connected with the estate, A all along continued to deal with it as absolute proprietress, and the dedication, though made in 185 , was never under the control of the Board of Revenue or of local agents. In a suit, which the plaintiffs obtained leave to institute under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863, to remove A from the mutwallship, on the ground of misfeasance,—Held, the wakfnama did not constitute a public religious establishment within the meaning of Act XX of 1863, and that, therefore, the Judge below had no authority to give the plaintiffs, under s. 18, leave to sue; and that his decision was consequently ultra vires. 1. ——— Seizure of Raj of Tanjore—Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts—Independent States.—The transactions of Independent States between each other are governed by other laws than those which Municipal Courts administer. The seizure by the British Government, acting as a sovereign power, through its delegate, the East India Company, of the Raj of Tanjore, with the property belonging thereto, was, with its consequences, an act of State over which a Municipal Court has no jurisdiction. 2. ——— Arrest under Beng. Reg. III of 1818—Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts.—A Mahomedan subject of the Crown was arrested in Calcutta, taken into the mofussil, and there detained in jail, under a warrant of the Governor-General in Council in the form prescribed by Reg. III of 1818. Held that such arrest and detainer were not acts of State, but matters cognizable by a Municipal Court. IN RE AMEER KHAN . . 6 B. L. R., 392

3. Resumption of Jagir by East India Company—Regulation law.—Where lands were held by a jagirdar under the sovereign of an independent State on a jaidad tenure, i.e., on a grant of land, together with the public revenues thereof, on the condition of keeping up a body of troops to be employed when called on in the service of the sovereign, and on the conquest of the State by the East India Company the jagirdar remained in the same position to the Company,—Held that the resumption of the lands by the Company, and the seizure of the arms and stores appertaining to the tenure, on the death of the jagirdar, was not an act of State, and therefore the Municipal Courts had jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the representatives of the jagirdar against the Government for the possession of the land and for the value of the arms and stores. This was so, although, at the time of the resumption, the Regulation law was not introduced into the territories in which the jagir was comprised. FORRESTER v. SECRETARY OF STATE

4. ——— Confiscation of territories of King of Delhi—Forfeiture.—The status of the King of Delhi was that of a King recognized by the British Government; and the confiscation of his territories in 1857 was an act of State, and not an act done under color of any legal right of which a Municipal Court could take cognizance. His tenure of the territories assigned him by the Government was a tenure merely durante regno, and no power was conferred upon him of creating incumbrances which would survive his deposition. The word 'confiscation' does not necessarily import that the appropriation is to be made as a penalty for a crime, nor, when used in that sense, does it necessarily imply that the forfeiture has accrued upon conviction; but it may also be properly used as applicable to appropriations of property by Government as an act of State. 5. ——— Confiscation by Governor of Foreign State—Title to timber.—The plaintiff brought a suit at Tonghoo in British Burma to recover possession of certain timber which he alleged the defendants had wrongfully, and in collusion with the Burmese Governor of Ninghan, taken out of his possession in foreign territory and removed to Tonghoo. The defendants stated that they had acquired the timber from the Governor of Ninghan in terms of an agreement between them and the Burmese Government. It appeared that the Governor of Ninghan had confiscated the plaintiff's timber in contravention of a royal mandate. After the institution of the suit, the defendants removed the timber from Tonghoo to Rangoon. Held that a British Municipal Court might enquire into the character of the act of the Governor of Ninghan, and was not bound to accept it as an act of State. 6. ——— Resumption by Government—Act of State—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—By the treaty of the 31st July 1801 between the then Nawab of the Carnatic and the Governor in Council at Madras, the sovereign rights of the Nawab in the Carnatic were vested in the East India Company. Held that a resumption by the Madras Government of a jagir granted by former Nawabs, as Altamghah inam, before the date of the treaty and a re-grant by Madras Government to another for a life estate only, was such an act of sovereign power by the East India Company as precluded the Supreme Court at Madras from taking cognizance of a suit by the heirs of the original grantee in respect of such resumption. EAST INDIA COMPANY v. SYEDALLY . . . 7 Moore's I. A., 555

7. ——— Resumption of village granted by Peishwa of the Deccan.—A village, having been granted in inam by the Peishwa of the Deccan, was, after the death of the grantee, seized by the mamlatdar or farmer of the revenues for an alleged debt due to him, and retained until the treaty of Poona in 1818, when it came into the possession of the British Government. In a suit instituted by the representatives of the original grantee for possession of the village, and payment of the arrears of revenue so sequestered, it was held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the decree of the Provincial and

Sudder Courts, that the original resumption was the wrongful act of an individual, and not an act of the State: the British Government were therefore ordered to restore the village, but pursuant to Bom. 9. ——— Seizure by right of conquest—Jurisdiction of Municipal Court.—Where an estate is seized by the Crown in right of conquest, and not by virtue of any legal title, such seizure must be regarded as an act of State, and is not liable to be questioned in a Municipal Court. Secretary of State for India in Council v. *Kamachee Boye Sahiba, 7 Moore's I. 10. ——— Resumption of inam village and re-grant, Effect of—Waikars, Status of—Treaties of 1820—Effect of grant of inam under construction—Attachment by Government of such village, Effect of.—From the year 1820 down to the year 1872 the Wáikar family had been in the enjoyment of the village of Pasarni under a treaty between the East India Company and one M A and K M, who were brothers and the last male descendants of M. For an alleged fraud of K M Government restricted the enjoyment of the said village to his lifetime only. A predeceased K. On the death of K M, Government, on the 31st December 1872, placed an attachment over the village. On the 13th July 1874, a judgment-creditor of A caused the lands in dispute, which were mirasi lands of the Waikar family situated at Pasarni, to be sold in execution of his decree against A, and they were purchased by the defendant, who was put in possession on the 22nd April 1876. In the meanwhile, Government, having chosen to recognise the plaintiff as a representative of the Waikar family, had removed the attachment, and re-granted the village to the plaintiff shortly before, viz., on the 3rd April 1876. The plaintiff, being dispossessed, sued the defendant, contending (inter alia) that A, having predeceased his brother, had no interest in the lands, which had been purchased by the defendant. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim, and directed the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs. The defendant appealed to the District Judge, who was of opinion that the proceedings of Government since the attachment in 1872 and restoration of the village were acts of State, and he varied the decree of the lower Court by cutting down the plaintiff's costs, made payable by the lower Court's decree, to half. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court, held, reversing the decree of the Lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's claim should be dismissed. The attachment placed by Government on the death of K M in December 1872 was limited to an exemption from assessment, and the resumption and re-grant to the plaintiff did not give the plaintiff any title to the lands in question. The proceedings of Government in 1873 and 1876, by which the plaintiff was recognised as the representative of the Waikar family, were not acts of State. The status of the Waikars and other persons, with whom the agreements of 1820 were entered into, was not that of an independent sovereign. They (the Waikars) were merely powerful saranjamdars subordinate to the Raja of Satara, and after the annexation of the territory of the Raja in 1849 they held their lands under the East India Company. Secretary of State for India v. Narayan Balvant Bhosle, Printed Judgments, 1883, p. 244, distinguished. ACTION IN REM.

1. ——— Owner indirectly impleaded—Towage contract—Vice-Admiralty.—The M S, a steam tug, was hired to tow the barque N down the Hughli, and in consequence of the negligence of the master of the tug whilst so employed, and of his wilful disobedience to the order of the pilot on board the N, the latter ran foul of a sailing vessel, the S F, considerable damage being done to both sailing vessels. The S F took proceedings against the N for the damage sustained, and an action in rem was brought (pending the proceedings taken by the S F) by the N against the tug to recover damages, including any damages that the N might have to pay to the owners of the S F. The defence set up by the tug was protection under its towage contract, which was to the effect that the proprietors of the tug should not be responsible under any circumstances for any loss or damage to any vessel whilst in tow of the tug, whether the same should have happened through the default of the master or other sailors, etc., of the tug, or through the incompetence or want of skill of the pilot in charge. The Court below held that the accident was due to the wilful disobedience of the master of the tug in not obeying the pilot on board the N, and that such misconduct was a "default" within the meaning of the clause in the towage contract; but inasmuch as the action was one in rem and not against the proprietors, the clause was no answer to the suit. Held, on appeal, that the clause was a sufficient answer; for that, although in every case of a proceeding in rem the suit is directly against the ship itself, still the owner of the ship must always be considered as indirectly impleaded. The application was set down as a contentious cause, and the executor appointed administrator pendente lite. As heirs under Mahomedan law, the plaintiffs were entitled to two-thirds share in the property left by the deceased, even if the Will was not established. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain a suit for administration by the Court against the administrator pedente lite, even though the probate proceedings have not been determined. KURATUL AIN BAHADUR v. BROUGHTON . 1 C. W. N., 336

4. ——— Suit by creditor—Misjoinder—Multifariousness—Practice.—The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator, and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made answerable as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate, is to be adhered to in this country, where there is a different procedure. Therefore, where, to a suit brought against the Administrator-General as administrator of the estate of one W B by a creditor of the deceased, other persons who also had a claim against the estate were made defendants, on the allegation that they had realized and were in possession of assets of the estate of the deceased,—Held that, there being nothing to show that such persons were in the position of an executor or administrator de son tort, or that they had been partners with the deceased, or that they could not be sued, if necessary, by the legal representative himself, and there being no other circumstances which would make it equitable that they should be sued jointly with the legal representative, they were wrongly made parties, and the suit ought to be dismissed as against them for misjoinder. Even assuming the facts were such that the plaintiff was entitled to sue them as legal representatives of the estate, he should not mix his own claim with that which the Administrator-General might have against them. Such a suit may be supported where the relations between the legal personal representative and the debtor to the estate present a substantial impediment to the prosecution by the legal personal representative of a suit against the debtor to recover the assets of the testator, and where there is a strong probability of the loss of such assets unless such a suit be allowed. But where there is an administration suit already pending, the proper course to pursue is to obtain an order in the administration suit, directing either a suit to be brought in the name of the legal personal representative, or appointing a Receiver to sue, and in this country the Courts might have the power to direct such Receiver to sue in his own name. In a suit supplemental to the former suit, the descendants of the sons of N, amongst whom were the descendants of A and B, claimed to be entitled to their share in the interest on the funds in the hands of the Court, and sought for a division of such accumulation of interest. Held that, notwithstanding that the debt due from A and B to the estate was barred, the descendants of A and B could not be allowed to share in the accumulations of interest in the hands of the Court without first satisfying the debt due by their ancestors to the estate. 14. ——— Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 202—Estate of intestate Native Christian—Suit for partition of estate by purchaser of widow's share before completion of administration—Dismissal of suit—Only remedy by way of administration suit.—A person to whom the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applied having died intestate in April 1884, his widow and son were in September of the same year granted letters of administration, which were cancelled for want of stamp duty, a fresh grant being made on 19th January 1885. Plaintiff, alleging that the said widow had executed a promissory note in her favour in September 1884, filed a suit against her on 6th January 1885, and, there being no appearance of the defendant, obtained an ex-parte decree. In execution of the decree so obtained, plaintiff attached portions of the estate of the deceased and brought them to sale, becoming herself the purchaser of the one-third share of the widow in each lot sold. In March 1885 the son was appointed sole administrator; in January 1888 he died, and the letters of administration were revoked in consequence, and the amin of the District Court was appointed administrator of the estate until October 1894, when the son's widow was so appointed in his stead. Plaintiff now sued for partition of the property comprised in the estate of the deceased in order that she might obtain delivery of the portions of it which she had purchased in execution of the decree against the widow previously obtained as aforesaid. The estate of the deceased had never been administered or distributed. The defence was that the said previous decree had been obtained by fraud:—Held that, under s. 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, the defendants were entitled to set up this defence; and that, the property of the deceased having become vested in his administrator under the Indian Succession Act, it remained so vested until the administrator had distributed the estate, and that, in consequence, the widow had no saleable interest in any part of the estate until in the course of the administration thereof her share had been determined and allotted to her. Until such allotment (which had not yet taken place) the only process by which plaintiff could legally claim the widow's interest in the estate was by a suit for the administration of the estate, to which suit the widow, if alive, would be a necessary party. If not alive, letters of administration to her estate would be necessary, the administrator being made a party. Held, also, that the suit could not be treated, as an administration suit. 2. Liability of administrator for loss to estate—Compromise of claim by administrator Subsequent suit by a creditor of estate to set aside the compromise and for damages for negligence of administrator—Succession Act (X of 1865), ss. 280 and 328 Administrator's liability for neglect to get in any part of the deceased's property.—One P mortgaged certain property to H for R2,667. H sued P to recover the mortgage-debt. Pending the suit, P died in 1878. Thereupon A, the son of P, took out letters of administration to the deceased's estate, and contested H's claim. H obtained a decree in the Court of first instance for the sale of the mortgaged property, and in execution of this decree the property was sold for R810 and purchased by H. The decree was afterwards, viz., on 2nd August 1883, reversed, on appeal, by the Assistant Judge. Thereupon H entered into a compromise with A, by which it was arranged that A should give up his claim under the appellate decree of the Assistant Judge, to be repaid by H the sum of R810 which he had realized by the sale of the mortgaged property, and that H should pay to A R240 on account of his costs incurred in the suit and in taking out letters of administration. This compromise was effected on 16th November 1883. In the meantime, on 14th September 1883, the plaintiff had purchased from one B an old decree which was outstanding against the estate of the deceased P. On 10th September 1883, the plaintiff sought to execute this decree against the mortgaged property. Having failed in this attempt, the plaintiff filed a suit against A for a declaration that the compromise of the 16th November 1883 had been fraudulently effected with the object of defeating his (the plaintiff's) claim, and to recover R1,000 as damages from the defendant on account of his fraudulent and negligent conduct as administrator of his deceased father's estate. This suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts, on the ground that, as there were other creditors who had claims against the estate, the plaintiff's proper remedy was an administration suit, which would enable the Court to assess the claims of all the creditors: Held (reversing the lower Court's decree) that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By the compromise of the 16th November 1883, the defendant had given up his right under the Appellate Court's decree of the 2nd August 1883 to be repaid by H the sum of R810, and had thereby occasioned a loss to the estate of that amount. He was, therefore, liable to the plaintiff to make good the amount under s. 328 of the Succession Act (X of 1865), subject, however, to a deduction, under s. 280 of that Act, of the expenses incurred by him in obtaining letters of administration, and the costs of any judicial proceeding that might be necessary for administering the estate. legal representative of his deceased father. Previously to the date of the decree (viz., on 4th March 1898), an order had been made by the High Court under ss. 17 and 18 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874), authorizing the Administrator-General to collect the assets of the deceased and ordering him, if necessary, to take out letters of administration to his estate. On the 29th April 1898, the plaintiff, under s. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), attached certain money in the hands of a third party due to the deceased's estate. On the 2nd July 1898, letters of administration were granted to the Administrator-General. Held that, as against the Administrator-General, the attachment was void ab initio. At the date of the decree obtained by the plaintiff, the Administrator-General was entitled, by virtue of the High Court's order, to take possession of the estate of the deceased. As soon as that order was made, his right to possession became paramount, and excluded that of the defendant (the son of the deceased), who was then no longer entitled to recover payment of debts due to his father. A decree, therefore, subsequently obtained against the defendant could not, as against the Administrator-General, confer any rights on the decree-holder, who could not stand in a better position than the defendant, his judgment-debtor. Under ss. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Administrator-General had the right to have the attachment removed, because he was exclusively entitled, at first by reason of the order under s. 18 of Act II of 1874 and subsequently by his letters of administration, to recover the debt, and was not subject to any decree which affected his title. Lallchand Ramdayal v. Gumtibai, 8 Bom., 140, distinguished. These proceedings took place in June and July; and on the 15th August administration was granted to the Administrator-General, the widow not having taken out administration. On the 28th September, the Administrator-General was, on plaintiff's application, made defendant in place of the widow, and the suit proceeded against him to decree. Before plaintiff applied to execute this decree, the amount of the sale-proceeds was, by he direction of the Civil Judge, handed over to the Administrator-General; accordingly, on this ground, plaintiff's application to the District Munsif for execution was rejected. He appealed unsuccessfully to the Civil Court. Held, on special appeal, that s. 33 of Act XXIV of 1867 took away plaintiff's right to payment otherwise than rateably with the other creditors. The executors appointed by the will took out probate on the 17th March 1891, and on the 14th August 1893 executed a deed, by which they purported, under s. 31 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874), to transfer all estates, effects, and interests vested in them to the Administrator-General of Bengal:—Held by PRINSEP and TREVELYAN, JJ., affirming the decision of SALE, J. (PETHERAM, C.J., dissenting), that the transfer was not a valid one. Held (on appeal) by the Privy Council that the right of executors to devolve the property of their testator, with all powers and duties relating to its administration, upon the Administrator-General, conferred by s. 31 of Act II of 1874, is not confined to any particular class of executors or of estates. The right is given to any executor in whom estate of the deceased has been vested by virtue of the probate upon the one condition that the Administrator-General shall consent. The admission of assets for the payment of a debt is also an admission of assets for the purposes of the suit, and extends to costs if the Court thinks fit to give them. There is nothing in s. 35 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874) which qualifies or restricts or otherwise interferes with the right of a creditor to demand immediate payment of his claim in full when the realizable assets in the hands of the Administrator-General are sufficient for the immediate payment of all claims in full. The "rateable payment" referred to in the above section as well as in s. 282 of the Succession Act (X of 1865), and in s. 104 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), is rateable payment out of the assets; it is nowhere provided that it shall be made out of the nett income of the estate or any other specific part of the assets. The language ("shall be liable to pay the costs") used in cl. 1 of s. 35 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874) shows that it was intended not to impose upon a creditor, to whom the condition of exemption was inapplicable, an absolute obligation to pay the costs of the suit, but to leave a discretion to the Court to relieve him of the obligation if the circumstances of the case required it. James v. *Young, L. 36. ——— Disclaimer of title—Pleadings—Admission by one of several defendants—Relinquishment—Disclaimer of title.—R, holding estates in Bengal jointly with his brothers as an undivided Hindu family, died leaving a widow, S, and three unmarried daughters, B, M, and N. On her husband's death, S continued to reside with his brothers, and was supported out of the income of the joint estate. All the daughters married in the lifetime of S, and B became a widow without having had a child. After the death of S, and in the lifetime of M, N also became a childless widow. M died after her mother, leaving a son, R K. R K, on attaining majority, sued to recover, with mesne profits, a 4-anna share of the ancestral estates to which he claimed to be entitled on his mother's death as heir of R, and from which he alleged he had been dispossessed by the representatives of R's brothers, whom he made defendants in the suit, joining B and N with them as co-defendants. Some time after the institution of the suit, a petition was filed purporting to proceed from B and N, by which they admitted that the plaintiff was the heir of R, and that they had no defence to offer. Held that, N being the heir of R, R K had not, during her lifetime, any right to any part of the estate, and that his position was not altered by the petition purporting to proceed from B and N, such petition not amounting to a conveyance or disclaimer of title in his favour. In the English Common Law Courts, and, à fortiori, in the Courts of Law in India, where the pleadings are less technical, an admission of a fact on the pleadings by implication is not an admission for any other purpose than that of the particular issue, and is not tantam unt to proof of the fact. An admission or even a confession of judgment by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against another defendant. AMIRTOLALL BOSE v. ROJONEEKANT MITTER . . . 15 B. L. R., 10 [23 W. 37. ——— Inheritance—Relinquishment—Admission on pleadings.—A plaintiff, suing two defendants M and L for the possession of certain property by right of inheritance, admitted in his plaint the right by inheritance of the defendant M to a moiety of the property, and only made him a defendant because he would not join in bringing the suit. The claim, however, was for the entire property. The defendant M filed a written statement setting forth that he had long ago willingly resigned all his rights in favour of the plaintiff, and that the suit had been instituted with his consent. Held that this statement was only an admission by M of the plaintiff's title, which could not be used against the other defendant L so as to entitle the plaintiff to a decree for the entire estate; that since L did not set up M's title to defeat the plaintiff, he could not be affected by M's disclaimer; and that the plaintiff could not be allowed in this suit to obtain M's share as his representative, for that would be to decree him the share on a title he never set up.

The third sister did not appear to defend the suit. Held that the Lower Courts were wrong in treating this admission as sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to a decree for possession, not only of their own share, but also of the shares of their three sisters, it being a fundamental proposition connected with the administration of justice that a plaintiff cannot sue for more than his own right, and that no defendant can, by an admission of consent of this kind, convey the right or delegate the authority to sue for more than his own share in property. Lachman Singh v. Tansukh, 6 A., 395, referred to. Against a plaintiff, who made title to the mortgaged mouzah and claimed possession of all of it that had passed by the mortgage, the mortgagors set up that there was more debutter in the mouzah than the deed had specified, the intention of the parties to the deed having been to exempt whatever debutter there actually was:—Held that the statement in the deed as to the quantity of the debutter was a deliberate admission, imposing upon the mortgagors who had made it the burden of proving that it was untrue, or that they were not bound by it; also that the Subordinate Judge's finding that the defendants had not given proof sufficient to discharge themselves of this, was correct. 9. ———— Proof of adultery—Sexual intercourse—Presumption of knowledge that woman is married.—In a case of adultery, sexual intercourse must be proved; the sexual intercourse required for adultery being the same identical thing as the sexual intercourse required for rape. The difference lies in the mode of proof: in rape, no presumption of sexual intercourse can be made; in adultery, it can be from evidence pointing strongly to an inference of guilt. It is not necessary, therefore, that there should be direct evidence of an act of adultery, nor that the adulterer should know whose wife the woman is, provided he knew she was a married woman. The accused was convicted under s. 498, Penal Code. The Sessions Judge made a reference under s. 438, Criminal Procedure Code, to the effect that the conviction under s. 498, Penal Code, was bad, inasmuch as there was no evidence whatever to show that the petitioner enticed away the complainant's wife from her husband's or her father's house with intent to have illicit intercourse with her, and that there could not be any conviction under s. 497, Penal Code, as the circumstances of the case warranted the conclusion that the offence, if any, had been condoned by the husband by his omission to take any steps since the last six or seven years against the accused. The High Court agreed with the view of the Sessions Judge. JASIMADDIN SHEIKH v. ICHOHAK MISTRY

The Chief Commissioner did not make any order on the memorandum of appeal admitting it, or directing that it should be registered, or that the respondent should be summoned, or that the appellant should appear on a certain day under s. 551 of Act X of 1877, but issued a notice to the appellant's counsel to appear on a certain day. The appellant's counsel appeared on that day, and the Chief Commissioner intimated that he was acting under s. 551 of Act X of 1877. The appellant's counsel then proceeded to address the Chief Commissioner, and was heard for some time, and then stopped in consequence of the Chief Commissioner resolving to refer to the High Court the question whether the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay to him or to Her Majesty in Council. The Chief Commissioner subsequently referred such question to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (SPANKIE, J., dissenting), on a reference by the Division Bench before which the Chief Commissioner's reference came, that such question arose "in the trial of an appeal" within the meaning of s. 21 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877, and was properly referred to the High Court. Held by the Division Bench (SPANKIE, J., and STRAIGHT, J.) that the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay, in this particular case, not to the Chief Commissioner, but to Her Majesty in Council. On the 13th November 1877, the decree-holder applied to the High Court for the admission of a second appeal from the order of the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that the decree had been misconstrued. Held that an appeal was admissible under the repealed Act VIII of 1859, under the provisions of s. 6 of Act I of 1868. Held also that the order of the lower Appellate Court was also appealable under Act X of 1877. (1) and (2) of that section, in relation to the conduct or proceedings of guardians, the order may be enforced in the same manner as an injunction granted under s. 492 or s. 493 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On a petition being presented to a District Court, asking that the guardians of certain minors, who had been appointed by the Court under the Guardian and Wards Act, might be removed, the Judge passed an order in which he purported to issue an injunction under s. 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the attachment of the estate of the minors and to appoint a receiver to manage the estate. On an appeal being preferred against the said orders, it was contended that the Judge must be taken to have acted under the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, and that, inasmuch as no appeal was provided by that Act in respect of such an order, no appeal lay:—Held that, though both orders were passed without jurisdiction, the Judge purporting to have acted under s. 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards the issue of an injunction, and under s. 503 as regards the appointment of a receiver, inasmuch as orders under either of these sections were appealable, the fact that the Judge had no power in this case to pass orders under them did not bar the High Court from treating the orders as having been passed thereunder for the purpose of entertaining an appeal against the orders, since there was no provision of law under which the Judge could pass orders attaching property or appointing a receiver without such orders being subject to appeal. Hurrish Chunder Chowdhry v. *Kali Sundari Debia, L. The District Judge having decided the question in favour of one of the claimants, the other appealed to the High Court. In appeal, it was contended that, as the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act apply to cases in which there was a dispute as to the apportionment of compensation, and not to cases in which there was no question as to apportionment, and in which each of the claimants laid claim to the entire amount of the compensation, the order passed by the District Judge was not appealable under the provisions of the Act, as there was no question of apportionment to be determined:—Held that, looking to the language of s. 15 of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870), which clearly contemplates the reference of such a dispute being provided for in the subsequent part of the Act, and as there is no other provision in the Act made for it, the term "apportionment" in Part IV should be given a liberal construction, as including the case where the Court has to decide between rival claimants to the entire compensation.

84. ——— In a suit in the Munsif's Court seven issues were fixed for determination, and the suit was then referred by agreement to three arbitrators. In coming to an award the arbitrators took up specifically some of the issues framed in the Munsif's Court, and declined to enter into others. They determined the matter in issue between the parties, and the award was signed by the three arbitrators. Two of the arbitrators subjoined to the award a suggestion which, if acted on, would prevent the necessity of carrying out the award. The Munsif dealt with this suggestion as surplusage, and gave the plaintiff a decree in accordance with the award signed by the three arbitrators. In appeal it was contended that the award was not a legal one, and it was sought to set the decree of the Munsif aside; but the Judge found that the decree was in accordance with the award, and that he was precluded by s. 325 from disturbing the decision of the Munsif. On special appeal it was contended that the award was incomplete, as all the issues were not decided, and that the decree was not in accordance with the award, as it did not embody the suggestion of the two of the three arbitrators. Held that the decree was in accordance with the award, and was, therefore, final under s. 325. gave an award in his favour. The Munsif refused to uphold the award, on the ground that the arbitrators had been guilty of misconduct in giving an award contrary to the evidence. The Judge revised their decision, on the ground that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to refer to the evidence taken before the arbitrators in order to determine whether they were guilty of misconduct or not: he gave judgment in accordance with the award. Held that his decision was not final under s. 325, Act VIII of 1859: the provisions of that section refer only to the Court by which the case is referred to arbitration. With the arbitrator's consent the defendant accepted such offer, and gave evidence on such oath. The arbitrator made an award in accordance with the evidence so given. The plaintiff objected to the award, not on any of the grounds mentioned in ss. 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code, but on the ground that the procedure of the arbitrator had been illegal. The Court disallowed this objection, and gave a judgment and decree in accordance with the award. Held by STRAIGHT, J., that such decree, being in accordance with the award, was not appealable. Held by STUART, C.J., that the award not being open to objection on any of the grounds mentioned in ss. 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the decree being in accordance with the award, the decree was not appealable. Held by OLDFIELD, J., that the procedure adopted by the arbitrator being illegal, not being warranted by the Oaths Act, and there being in reality no award within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, the decree therefore was appealable. Per STUART, C.J., that the procedure of the arbitrator did not require to be warranted by the Oaths Act, as he was entitled by virtue of his office to proceed as he did. 221. ——— Order directing accounts to be taken—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 2—Interlocutory order.—In a suit for a share of the cost of a party wall built by the plaintiffs, who, and also the defendant, were adjoining owners of plots of land under the Government for building, portion of the agreement being that all disputes as to the cost and maintenance of party walls were to be settled by the Government Surveyor, whose decision was to be final—the Judge, SCOTT, J., on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendant was liable to pay half whatever sum the Government Surveyor might certify to be due for the cost, and that the defendant was entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from him, the cost of any work or materials which the Government Surveyor might find had been contributed by him: and the case was thereupon adjourned for the certificate of the Government Surveyor. The Government Surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government Surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government Surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that the decree of the 11th December 1882 was not a decree or an "order directing accounts to be taken" within the meaning of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), and that the defendants, although they had not filed an appeal against it within the period allowed by the Limitation Act, were entitled to appeal against it when appealing against the decree of 11th December 1883. lay in an appeal to the District Judge. The plaintiff was not informed of the result of his application to the Special Judge until the following May, at which time the Court of the District Judge was closed for vacation. The Munsif found both objections against them, and allowed the purchaser to execute the decree. Held that the question was one between the parties to the suit or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree, and that the decision of that question was a decree under ss. 2 and 244 of the Code and therefore appealable, and a second appeal lay therefrom to the High Court. The amount of the property exceeded, but the amount of the share claimed was within the pecuniary limit of the jurisdiction of the District Munsif, who passed a decree for the plaintiff. On appeal it was held that the suit was not within the jurisdiction of the Court. The decree accordingly was reversed, and it was ordered that the plaint be returned for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff preferred this second appeal to the High Court:—Held that the Lower Appellate Court had not passed a decree within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 2, and that plaintiff's remedy was not by way of a second appeal, but he should have proceeded under Civil Procedure Code, s. 588. 232. ——— Order rejecting application under Civil Procedure Code, s. 44, rule (a), and returning plaint—Civil Procedure Code, s. 44, rule (a), and s. 2—"Decree."—No appeal lies under any of the provisions of s. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code from an order under s. 44, rule (a), rejecting an application for leave to join another cause of action with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property. In a plaint filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house, together with some grain which was stored in it. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave, under s. 44, rule (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house.

The Subordinate Judge refused leave, and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain, respectively, in the Court of the Munsif. Held that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property; that although this might have been a misapplication of s. 44, rule (a), of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint; that such an order was a decree with reference to the definition in s. 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge; and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under s. 622. 240. ——— Order directing accounts to be taken—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 2 and 591—Suit for dissolution of partnership and an account—Omission to appeal from preliminary order—Limitation.—The right of appeal given by Act XII of 1879 in making an order directing accounts to be taken within the definition of a decree, and thus giving an appeal in a preliminary stage of a suit for dissolution of a partnership, did not alter the existing law, which allowed an appeal against such an order on the termination of the trial, that is, in the final decree. In a suit for dissolution of partnership and an account, the Munsif, on the 25th April 1893, passed an order declaring the shares of the parties and directing them to render accounts, stating that "this must be done within fifteen days from this date, after which the final order will be passed," and referred the case to a Commissioner to take the accounts. On the 31st May 1893, the Munsif decreed the suit, and made defendants Nos. 1 and 2 liable to pay certain sums of money in accordance with the report of the Commissioner. On the 14th July 1893, defendant No. 1 filed an appeal to the District Judge, in which he questioned the correctness of the preliminary order of the Munsif making him liable as a partner. Held that the order of the District Judge, allowing the plea of defendant No. 1 and finding that he was not a partner, was right, though no appeal against the preliminary order had been filed within the period of limitation. A vakalatnama had been previously filed on the defendant's part, and he had also objected to an application filed by the plaintiff for attachment of the defendant's property before judgment. Held that these acts on the defendant's part did not constitute an "appearance" by him within the meaning of s. 100 of the Civil Procedure Code, which referred to an appearance in answer to a summons to appear and answer the claim on a day specified, issued under s. 64; that the decree was therefore ex-parte within the meaning of ss. 100 and 108, and an appeal consequently lay to the High Court under s. 588, cl. The Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that the application could not be granted, inasmuch as the execution of the decrees was then barred by limitation, referred the case to the High Court under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the question could not be referred under s. 617 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), as the order applied for to the Subordinate Judge was appealable under s. 2 of the Code. 325. ——— Order allowing mortgagor to deposit in Court amount due after date fixed—Ministerial act—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 244, 588.—S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that there must be some question in controversy and conflict in execution which has been brought to a final determination and conclusion so as to be binding upon the parties to the proceedings, and which must relate in terms to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. A judgment-debtor under a decree for foreclosure made an application to the Court two days after the expiry of time prescribed by the decree for payment of the amount due thereunder, in which she alleged that, by reason of the two previous days having been holidays, she had been unable to pay the money before, and asked to be allowed to deposit the same. Upon this application the Court passed the following order:—"Permission granted. Applicant may deposit the money." The money was deposited accordingly. Held that the order was merely a ministerial act, and nothing more than a direction from the Judge to his subordinate official to receive the money, which, as it did not fall within either s. 244 or s. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, was not appealable; and that the proper remedy of the decree-holder, assuming the deposit to have not been made in time, was to apply for an order absolute for foreclosure, which order would be subject to any steps the parties affected by it might take by way of appeal or otherwise. 336. ——— Claim by legal representative to property as his own independently of deceased judgment-debtor—Separate suit—Jus tertii—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 234, 244, 278 and 283.—Held by the Full Bench (TYRRELL, J., dissenting): where a judgment-debtor dies after the passing of the decree, and his legal representatives are brought on the record in execution proceedings to represent him in respect of the decree, questions which they raise as to property which they say does not belong to his assets in their hands, and as such is not capable of being taken in execution, are questions which under s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code must be determined in the execution department, and not by separate suit. There is no distinction in this respect between the positions of legal representatives added to the suit before, and those added after, the decree. Under the last paragraph of s. 234, the Court executing the decree may try and determine the question whether property in the legal representative's hands formed part of the deceased judgment-debtor's estate, and find this fact for the purpose of bringing the property to sale in execution, and giving the auction-purchaser a good title under the sale; and the Court's order is subject to appeal, but not to a separate suit under s. 283. 337. ——— Questions between execution-creditor and persons placed on the record as representative of deceased judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 244, 278, and 283.—Certain decree-holders obtained during the lifetime of their judgment-debtor attachment of certain immoveable property as belonging to the said judgment-debtor; but, on the decree-holders seeking to bring the property to sale, one S D came forward with an objection that the property was his, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree in question. Pending the decision of the Court on this objection, the decree-holders applied to the Court to have the names of S D and the widow of the judgment-debtor (who died about the time the previous objection was filed) placed on the record as representatives of the judgment-debtor. S D filed a similar objection to this application also; but both objections, being heard together on the 6th September 1892, were dismissed, and S D was placed on the record as representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. On appeal by S D against "the order of the District Judge of Jaunpur of the 6th September 1892," it was held that the order making S D a party to the execution proceedings as representative of the judgment-debtor rendered any order as to his former objection superfluous, and that order was appealable under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 338. ——— Assignment of decree—Limitation—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 232, 244, 540, and 588.—Where a Court, on the application of a transferee of a decree for execution, decides that he is not a transferee under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, or that, although he is a transferee within the meaning of that section, he is not a representative of a party to the suit, or that by reason of limitation he is not entitled to obtain execution of the decree, it has determined a question or questions mentioned or referred to in s. 244 of the Code, and though not specified in s. 588, an appeal lies under s. 540. Parmanadas Jiwandas v. *Vallabji Walljí, I. 339. ——— Question whether transferee of decree is the representative of decree-holder—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 232, 244—Decree.—An order of a Court executing a decree determining whether an alleged transferee from a decree-holder or from his legal representative is or is not the representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of s. 244, cl. (c), of the Code of Civil Procedure, is an order under that section and therefore a decree, and an appeal lies from such order. Dwar Buksh Sircar v. *Fatik Jali, I. L. 340. ——— Order refusing to allow representative to take out execution until granted certificate—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244.—On appeal from an order allowing an application by the legal representative of a deceased decree-holder for execution, the Appellate Court, holding that the applicant must obtain a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 before he could take out execution of the decree, made an order directing that execution of the decree should be stayed until the applicant had obtained such certificate. Held that such order fell under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and was therefore appealable. HOTI LALL v. HARDEO . . . . I. L. R., 5 All., 212

341. ——— Order staying execution of decree.—All orders staying execution of decrees, whether passed by the Court which passed the decree or by the Court to which it is sent for execution, are "questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and relating to the execution" thereof, within the meaning of s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code, and, as such, appealable, irrespective of the provisions of s. 588. Kristomohiny Dossee v. *Bama Churn Nag Chowdry, I. 342. ——— Order staying execution of decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 2, 243, 244—Decree.—An order under s. 243 of the Civil Procedure Code staying execution of a decree determines a question relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s. 244, and is therefore a decree within the meaning of s. 2; an appeal therefore lies from such order. STEEL v. ICHCHAMOYI CHOWDHRAIN . . I. L. R., 13 Calc., 111

343. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 2 and 244—Stay of execution—Amount of security required in granting of execution; a question in execution and order thereon appealable.—The defendant in a redemption suit against whom a decree had been passed appealed to the High Court, which on his application granted the usual stay of execution pending the appeal, upon security being given by him. The Subordinate Judge, feeling doubt as to whether the actual value of the property or the value stated in the plaint should be regarded in fixing the security, referred the case to the High Court. Held that the question as to the amount of the security was a question relating to execution as contemplated by s. 244 of the Code, and, therefore, an order determining that question would be appealable under s. 2 of the Code. ISHWARGAR v. CHUDASAMA MANABHAI [I. L. R., 12 Bom., 30

344. ——— Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 244—Question as to what had actually been subject of sale—Question between judgment-debtor and auction-purchaser.—Land was sold in execution of a decree of a subordinate Court, and a sale-certificate was issued. A question having subsequently arisen as to what had actually been the subject of the sale, the auction-purchaser applied to the Court, and an order was made by which the sale-certificate was amended. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Court joining the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser as respondents. The appeal was dismissed on the ground that no appeal lay. Held that the question was not one which could be determined under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 244, and consequently the decision of the lower Appellate Court was right. After the issue of the sale-notification, and three days prior to the date fixed for the sale, one of the judgment-debtors applied to have the sale stayed on the ground that an administration suit was pending with respect to the property of his father, the mortgagor, and also asked that a receiver might be appointed and arrrangements made for the purpose of paying off the mortgage-debt and saving the property from being sold. On this application the Court passed an order staying the sale. Held that such order was appealable, being a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and relating to the execution of that decree, and as such coming within the provision of cl. (c), s. 244, Act X of 1877. Gambhirmal v. Chejmal Jodhmal, 11 Bom., 151, distinguished. KRISTOMOHINEY DOSSEE v. BAMA CHURN NAG CHOWDHRY . . . I. L. R., 7 Calc., 733 [9 C. L. R., 344

346. ——— Order directing application to stay sale in execution proceedings on ground of under-valuation—Decree.—An application was made by certain defendants, against whom a decree had been passed, for an order that a sale at the instance of the decree-holder, in execution of his decree, should not be proceeded with on the ground that in the sale-proclamation the value of the property had been underestimated. The Subordinate Judge held the undervaluation to be immaterial, and dismissed the application, whereupon the judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court. On the preliminary objection being there taken that no appeal lay from the order of dismissal,—Held that an appeal lay, the order having been made with reference to a question which related to the execution, and the question being one arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed and relating to its execution, within the meaning of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The property was put up for sale again on the following day under s. 306 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and was in due course knocked down for a smaller sum. The judgment-debtor filed a petition under s. 293 to recover from the decree-holder the loss by resale; the petition was rejected. 1861, s. 11—Party to suit.—A female plaintiff obtained a decree against certain defendants, declaring certain ekrarnamahs, etc., void as against her husband and his representatives. After his death she proceeded to execute the decree as one for possession, and obtained an order, under s. 223, Act VIII of 1859, for delivery of possession of property in the possession of a third party as being a person claiming under a title created by the defendants subsequently to the institution of the suit. The third party appealed from that order. Held that this was not a case in which an appeal lay under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, inasmuch as the questions raised by the appeal were not questions between the parties to the suit. Several subsequent applications for execution were made, against one of which the objection was raised by some of the representatives of the judgment-debtor, that the decree was barred by lapse of time; but it was overruled by the High Court in special appeal. A further application was made, and was opposed by one of the representatives who had since attained his majority upon the ground that the suit was barred. The Munsif disallowed the objection. On appeal the Judge reversed his decision. Held, in special appeal, that the terms of s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, did not prohibit an appeal by a representative of a deceased judgment-debtor against an order passed in execution of a decree against his ancestor. The judgment-debtors objected to the attachment and proposed sale on the ground that the house was their own private property and not the property of the debtor within the meaning of the decree, having been validly transferred to them during the debtor's lifetime. The decree-holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment-debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment-debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale; also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received, and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment-debtor took no part in the contest. Held that the mortgagee was a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 244, and that an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge. 374. ——— Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11—Attachment under s. 237, Act VIII of 1859.—One of several decree-holders, who had obtained separate decrees against the same judgment-debtor, attached, under s. 237 of Act VIII of 1859, a fund in the hands of the Collector belonging to the debtor, being the surplus proceeds of a sale for arrears of Government revenue, and the fund was subsequently attached by the other decree-holders. The fund was not sufficient to satisfy all the decrees in full. The Principal Sudder Ameen, by order of the Judge, heard the various execution cases together, but recorded separate orders in each case for the rateable distribution of the fund amongst the creditors. On appeal by the first attaching creditor, who claimed to be entitled to be paid the amount of his decree in full, to which appeal the rival decree-holders, as well as the judgment-debtor, were made parties,—Held (per PEACOCK, C.J., and SETON-KARR, JACKSON, and HOBHOUSE, JJ.) that the several orders of the Principal Sudder Ameen were substantially only one order made upon one hearing in one case, to which all the execution-creditors in the several suits were parties; that the rival decree-holders were properly made respondents in the appeal, and could not be struck out; and that the question to be determined being one between the rival decree-holders, and not between the parties in each suit, the case was not appealable under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Held, per MACPHERSON, J., that though no appeal would lie as regards the rival decree-holders, the appeal was maintainable as regards the judgment-debtor alone. 377. ——— Assignee of interest in suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 244, and ss. 278, 283—Representative.—The holders of a talukh hypothecated certain other property belonging to them as security for the rent. A decree for rent was obtained against them. Prior to attachment, the talukhdars assigned their interest in eight annas of the hypothecated property to A, and made a maurasi lease of the remaining eight annas to him. The decree-holder then obtained an order for summary sale for the rent due for 1876-77. She then attempted to sell the property hypothecated to her. An objection by A was allowed. A regular suit was then instituted by the decree-holder against A, and it was declared that she was, after selling the talukh, entitled to sell the hypothecated property. The decree-holder again attempted to execute her rent-decree by attaching and selling the hypothecated property, and an objection by A was disallowed. Held that no appeal lay from the order disallowing the objection, as A could not be considered to be a "representative" of the talukhdars within the meaning of s. 244, cl. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code, and was, therefore, debarred from appealing under ss. 278 and 283. RASHBEHARY MOOKHOPADHYA v. SURNOMOYEE [I. L. R., 7 Calc., 403 9 C. L. R., 79

378. ——— Attachment—Objection to attachment by judgment-debtor on behalf of others—Order against decree-holder—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 244, 280, 283.—Where a judgment-debtor claims property which is the subject-matter of attachment, either on his own account as his own property, under whatever right, or as the representative of third parties in which capacity he has been sued, the question between him and the attaching creditor is properly one between the parties to the suit under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where the judgment-debtor raises the claim or objection on behalf of third parties who are not represented before the Court, the order passed thereon must be regarded as an order under s. 280 of the Code, and the only mode in which that order can be contested is in a regular suit as provided by s. 283. In execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor in his private capacity, the judgment-creditor attached certain property. Thereupon the judgment-debtor objected that the property attached had been dedicated by him some time previous as wakf under a registered wakfnamah, and that he was only in possession as mutwali under the deed. The lower Court found that the document created a valid wakf, and allowed the objection and released the property from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended that no appeal lay, inasmuch as the order was one under s. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of the judgment-creditor it was contended that the order was one under s. 244, and was thus appealable. Held that the order was one under s. 280, and that no appeal lay, the remedy of the judgment-creditor being by way of a regular suit as provided by s. 283. 379. ——— Order on claim by trustee for release of trust property attached under personal decree against trustee—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 244, 278 to 283—Appeal from such order.—A decree-holder having attached certain property in the course of execution, two of the defendants in the suit in which the decree had been passed presented a petition praying that the property might be released from the attachment on the ground that it had been set apart for charitable purposes, and that it was held by defendants as trustees. The Subordinate Judge upheld the trust, and ordered the properties to be released from the attachment. Plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, when objection was taken that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge. The Court referred to a Full Bench the question whether an appeal lies against an order passed with regard to a party to a suit against whom there is a personal decree, in respect of a claim he may set up to hold property, attached in execution of that decree, as a trustee on behalf of third persons not parties to the suit. Held that such a claim falls under s. 278, and not under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that no appeal lies against any order passed on it by the Court executing the decree. The claims of third parties, whether put forward by themselves or by a party to the suit, must be dealt with under ss. 278 to 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and not under s. 244. Roop Lall Dass v. *Bekani Meah, I. After the presentation of the plaint in another Court, and before the termination of the suit, the Collector applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the order as to costs, by seeking to recover the amount of the stamp duty from the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge refused to execute the order, on the ground that the pauper suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court,—Held that there was no appeal, and, therefore, no second appeal, under s. 244, cl. Rent Act (XVIII of 1873), s. 148—Landholder and tenant—Suit in which right to receive rent is disputed—Determination of such right—Determination of proprietary right.—C sued J for the rent for certain land, alleging that he was the tenant of such land and J was his sub-tenant. J disputed C's right to receive rent for such land, alleging that he was not his sub-tenant, but S's, and had paid such rent to S. Under the provision of s. 148 of Act XVIII of 1873, S was made a party to the suit. The Collector decided on appeal in the suit that S, and not C, was the tenant of such land, and J was her sub-tenant, and not C's, and had paid such rent to S. Held that there was no determination by the Collector of the title to such land, but as incidental to the question who was entitled to receive the rent, and consequently the decision of the Collector was not appealable to the District Judge. The defendants pleaded payment to V, who was accordingly brought on to the record as a co-defendant under s. 148 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act (XII of 1881). The Collector decided in favour of V. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, making all three persons respondents. The District Judge reversed the decision of the Collector, and ordered the whole costs to be paid by V, who thereupon appealed to the High Court. Held that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal so far as the party brought in under s. 148 was concerned, and, that being so, had no power to award costs against him. His right to receive rent was disputed by H, a third person, who was made a defendant under the provisions of s. 148 of Act XVIII of 1873. The suit was tried by an Assistant Collector of the second class, who decided that K was entitled to the rent. H and B appealed to the Collector, who decided that H was entitled to the rent. K thereupon appealed to the District Judge, who affirmed the decision of the Collector. K then appealed to the High Court. Held that the Collector was not competent to entertain an appeal by H; that as between K and B all that the Collector could decide was whether or not K was entitled to the amount of rent claimed; that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain K's appeal; and that K's appeal to the High Court was not entertainable, the District Judge not having decided any question of proprietary right that would justify such an appeal. forth the rules which were to govern the partition, and this proceeding was confirmed by the Collector under s. 131. An Amin was ordered to carry out the partition, and, in taking steps to do so, stated the principle upon which he proposed to distribute the common land. An objection was then for the first time raised by two of the co-sharers in the Court of the Assistant Collector to the inclusion of a particular piece of land in the partition, on the ground that it appertained exclusively to their share. This objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector and, on appeal, by the District Judge. Held that, at the stage of the proceedings when objections were taken, it was too late to determine questions of title under s. 113 of the Act; that accordingly the Assistant Collector could not be said to have done so; that the objections could, therefore, only be regarded in the light of objections to the mode in which it was proposed to make the partition; and that consequently there was no appeal from the order of the Assistant Collector to the District Judge, or from the District Judge to the High Court. On the 24th July 1888, an application for review was filed with the Registrar. Various reasons prevented the two Judges from sitting together until the month of March 1889. On the 6th March the matter came up before them when a rule was issued, calling upon the respondents to show cause why a review should not be granted, and made returnable on the 28th March 1889. 458. ——— Suit to establish right—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 278, 283.—An objection was made to the attachment of certain property in the execution of a decree by the judgment-debtor on the ground that such property was in his possession, not as his own property, but on account of an endowment. This objection was one of the nature to be dealt with under s. 278 and following sections of Act X of 1877. The Court executing the decree made an order against the decree-holder releasing the property from attachment. Held that such order was not appealable, the fact that the objection was made by the judgment-debtor notwithstanding, and the decree-holder's proper remedy was to institute a suit under the provisions of s. 283 of Act X of 1877. In execution of this decree, the plaintiff caused certain property to be attached as belonging to the deceased. The defendants objected to the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to them. The Court executing the decree proceeded to investigate this objection, and finding that the property did not belong to the defendants, but to the deceased, disallowed it. Held that the proceedings upon such objection were taken under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the order disallowing it was therefore not appealable. original suit out of which the execution suit arose exceeded R5,000. The Munsif gave the plaintiff a decree. On appeal the Subordinate Judge reversed it. Against the order of the Subordinate Judge the plaintiff appealed to the High Court on the ground that the proceedings under s. 331 were merely a continuation of the original suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, and as no appeal lay against a decision passed under that section, no appeal lay to the Subordinate Judge. Held that proceedings under s. 331 of the Code are in the nature of a fresh suit between the decree-holder and a third party, and therefore an appeal lay to the Subordinate Judge. Ravloji Tamaji v. *Dholapa Raghu, I. 503. ———— Order returning plaint for presentation in proper Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 584.—A suit to redeem a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands was instituted in the Munsif's Court. After the suit had been admitted and the parties called on to produce evidence, the Munsif ordered the plaint in the suit to be returned to the plaintiff for presentation in the proper Court on the ground that the suit should have been instituted in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, the value of the property in suit being beyond the jurisdiction of a Munsif. Held that, under Act VIII of 1859, the Munsif's order was appealable to the lower Appellate Court, and, under Act X of 1877, the lower Appellate Court's order to the High Court. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from such order as an order returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court. Held that such order could not be regarded as one to which art. 6 of s. 588 of Act X of 1877 was applicable. On appeal from such order, the Appellate Court, holding that the Court of first instance was competent to try such suit, made an order "decreeing the appeal." It subsequently made an additional order directing that the case "should be returned for re-trial." On appeal to the High Court from such additional order,—Held that the appeal would not lie, as it was in reality one from an order passed in appeal from an order returning a plaint, which under the last clause of s. 588 of Act X of 1877 was final, and not an appeal from an order remanding a case under s. 562, the character of the original order of the Appellate Court not being altered by the passing of the additional order. The Court, after hearing the parties, made an order allowing the "petition of amendment," and rejecting the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed from such order to the High Court. Held that, inasmuch as orders amending plaints then and there are not made appealable by Act X of 1877, and it was into this category, if into any at all, that such order must fall, such order was not appealable. 511. ———— Decree—Judgment—Objections by respondent to decree—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 540, 561, 584.—In a suit to obtain possession of certain property, and to set aside a deed called a deed of endowment (wakfnama) on the ground that the defendant had fraudulently obtained its execution, the defendant pleaded (i) that the deed was a valid one, and (ii) that she was in possession of the property in satisfaction of a dower-debt, and her possession could not be disturbed so long as the debt remained unsatisfied. The Court of first instance held that the deed was invalid, but that the defendant was entitled to remain in possession of the property till her dower-debt was satisfied, and the Court passed a decree which merely dismissed the suit, without embodying the finding as to the deed. On appeal by the plaintiff to the District Judge, the defendant filed objections under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to the first Court's decision that the deed of endowment was invalid. The Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal, affirming the finding as to dower, and, refusing to decide the question of the validity of the deed as being unnecessary for disposal of the claim, disallowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD and MAHMOOD, JJ., dissenting), that if a decree is, upon the face of it, entirely in favour of a party to a suit, such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable, and nothing else, that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If, in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression, findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party, and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree, so as to allow of his filing objections thereto under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under s. 540, he must take steps under s. 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment, so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him; but if he fails to take this course, the decree, though in general terms, will stand good as finally deciding the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of, as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree, amount to no more than obiter dicta, and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that in the present case the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT, J., in Lachman Singh v. *Mohan, I. L. On appeal the Appellate Court remanded the case for the purpose of a local investigation being held at the cost, in the first instance, of the plaintiff. The lower Court thereupon made an order that the plaintiff should deposit the costs of the local investigation, and, on default being made by the plaintiff, it dismissed the suit. The order of remand was found to be invalid as made without jurisdiction. Held that all proceedings taken by the Court of first instance after the remand and pending the hearing of the appeal against the remand order were null and void, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of that Court to hear the case upon remand depended upon the validity of the remand order. Commissioner having taken the account and made his report, an order was made, on further directions, varying it in certain respects. Subsequently a final decree was passed, founded in part on the order on further directions. An appeal was filed against the final decree, in which objection was taken to the order on further directions. It was contended that no appeal having been filed against the order on further directions, as might have been done under s. 15 of the Letters Patent, so much of the appeal as arose out of that order had been barred by lapse of time. Held that the order passed on further directions was not appealable under Chapter XLI of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that it fell, therefore, under the concluding portion of s. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code, and any error in it might subsequently be set forth as a ground of appeal against the final decree. Per JENKINS, C.J.—Assuming that the order on further directions was a judgment within the meaning of s. 15 of the Letters Patent, and as such appealable, the contention of the respondent cannot prevail, as that would not deprive the appellants of their right to appeal under the Code. 555. ——— Order made in the course of execution proceedings and not appealed against—Right to raise the question as to its propriety in the appeal against the final order.—A decree having in 1894 been passed in favour of the plaintiff in a suit against a number of defendants for the recovery of land with mesne profits, the amount of such mesne profits was ordered to be fixed in execution. In 1897, an order was passed declaring that all the defendants were liable jointly and severally for such mesne profits, which order was not appealed against. Later in the same year a Commissioner was appointed to ascertain the amount of the said mesne profits, and in due course a final order in execution was passed by the District Court. At the time when the last-mentioned order was passed, certain of the defendants desired to re-open the question of their joint liability, but were not permitted to do so. Held that, even assuming that the order declaring the defendants to be jointly and severally liable was one from which an appeal could have been preferred,—as to which there might be some doubt,—it was a determination of one of the questions which had to be determined before the particular application for execution could be finally disposed of; and the question of the propriety of the order was one that need not be at once raised by appeal, but could be raised in the appeal against the final order. Caussanel v. *Soures, I. His successor in office was brought on to the record, and revoked his nomination and made a fresh nomination. The subordinate Court treated the fresh nomination as a nullity, and made an order confirming the first. The pandaram appealed against this order. Held (1) that an appeal lay against the order complained of; (2) that the person whose nomination had been confirmed was a necessary party to the appeal. On appeal against the order confirming the sale, the High Court set the sale aside. The purchaser preferred an appeal to the Privy Council, pending which he had to give up possession of the land, but security was furnished under an order of the Court by persons not parties to the suit for its re-delivery to him and for payment of mesne profits in case of his appeal being successful. On appeal, the Privy Council reversed the order of the High Court. The purchaser was accordingly replaced in possession of the land, and he applied for execution in respect of the mesne profits against the respondents in the Privy Council and the sureties. The Court of first instance dismissed the application as against the sureties, and limited the applicant's claim against the others to the net income of the land, less the cost of management, and allowed him no interest. Held the order must be taken to have been made under Civil Procedure Code, s. 610, and an appeal lay therefrom. The judgment-debtor subsequently applied to the Subordinate Judge for a review of judgment. The Subordinate Judge, without recording his reasons for granting such application, and without recording an order granting such application, irregularly proceeded at once to pass an order setting aside such sale, without cancelling the previous order confirming it. The auction-purchaser appealed to the District Judge. That officer, treating the appeal as one from an order granting an application for review of judgment, entertained it, and set aside the Subordinate Judge's second order. Held that the District Judge was not justified in entertaining such appeal, such order not being one granting an application for review, but one setting aside a sale, and, as such, not appealable. 605. ——— Order confirming sale before time for filing objections has expired—Appeal from order—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 311, 312—Objection to sale—Legal disability.—Although s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that objections to a sale under s. 311 shall be filed before an order for confirmation is passed, if the precipitate action of the Court has led to the confirmation of a sale before the time allowed for filing objection to the sale has expired, whether or not that Court could entertain such objections after confirming the sale, the High Court on appeal is bound to interfere, and to see that objections which by law the appellant is empowered to make are heard and determined before a sale of his property is confirmed or becomes absolute. An application under s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, on behalf of a judgment-debtor who was a minor, was rejected on the ground that the applicant did not legally represent the minor, and the Court thereupon confirmed the sale. A second application to the same effect was then filed on behalf of the minor by his guardian, and was rejected on the ground that the Court had already confirmed the sale, and was precluded from entertaining objections after such confirmation, prior to which no proper application had been filed. From this order the judgment-debtor appealed. Held that the appeal must be considered to be one from an order under the first paragraph of s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, confirming the sale after disallowing the appellant's objection, and that it would, therefore, lie. The order disallowing the application and the order confirming the sale were set aside and the case remanded for disposal of the appellant's objections. BALDEO SINGH v. KISHAN LAL . I. L. Some of the defendants appealed to the High Court without making the other defendants party-respondents. The plaintiffs preferred a cross-objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The non-appealing defendants were added as respondents by an order of the High Court to the effect that they might be made parties without prejudice to any objection that might be urged on their behalf at the hearing of the appeal. The non-appealing defendants at the hearing of the appeal contended that they were wrongly made parties, and that the plaintiffs could not urge their cross-objection as against them. Held that, as a general rule, the right of a respondent to urge cross-objections should be limited to his urging them against the appellant, and it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge a cross-objection against another respondent, the exception holding good, among other cases, in those in which the appeal of some of the parties opens out questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents; but as there was nothing exceptional in this case, the plaintiffs were not allowed to urge their cross-objections against the

In a suit between the widows of two brothers deceased, the plaintiff's title rested on this, that her and the defendant's late husbands, respectively, having been the sons of the same father, had, therefore, been sapindas to each other, so that the plaintiff as the widow of the one would be the heir of the other, expectant on the death of his widow. In this character she sued to have set aside an adoption made by the defendant. The Courts, however, found that the plaintiff's husband was an illegitimate son, and not a sapinda, and the suit was dismissed. The Sessions Judge postponed passing any final decision upon this application, until it became apparent that the charge under s. 206 was not sustainable on the evidence to be adduced by the prosecution. After hearing the evidence for the prosecution on this charge, the Sessions Judge, without going into the defence or recording the opinions of the assessors, passed an order of acquittal. At the same time, he rejected the application for framing new heads of charge, holding, on the authority of Queen-Empress v. Appa, I. L. R., 8 Bom., 200, that he had no power to frame any new charges in addition to the original charge. He was also of opinion that the dismissal of a complaint, which the prosecutor had previously filed against the accused on the very charges which were sought to be added, was also a sufficient ground for rejecting the application. The Local Government appealed to the High Court against the order of acquittal. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended on behalf of the Crown that the Sessions Judge was wrong in refusing to frame additional charges as sought by the Public Prosecutor. The accused's counsel objected to this point being raised by Government in an appeal against an order of acquittal. Held, per TELANG, J., (1) that under s. 417 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X 1882) it was not open to Government to appeal to the High Court on the ground of the Sessions Judge's refusal to add new charges, or against any other interlocutory order made during the trial. (2) That the Sessions Judge ought to have finally disposed of the application for framing additional charges at the very commencement of the trial when it was made, especially because it did not purport to be based on any facts other than those contained in the depositions recorded by the committing Magistrate. 3. ——— Award under Act XVIII of 1848—Administration of private estate of Nawab of Surat—Statutes 7 & 8 Vict., c. 69; 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 41.—An Act of the Legislature of India—(XVIII of 1848)—empowered the Governor in Council of Bombay to administer the private estate of the late Nawab of Surat, and it was by s. 2 enacted "that no Act of the said Governor of Bombay in Council in respect of the administration to, and distribution of, such property, from the date of the death of the said Nawab, should be liable to be questioned in any Court of law or equity." No provision was made for an appeal from the Governor's decision. In pursuance of the power conferred by this Act, the Government agent at Surat, to whom the matter was referred, made an award distributing the estate in certain shares among the heirs of the deceased, which award was confirmed by the Governor in Council. On an application by a claimant dissatisfied with the award to the Judicial Committee, for leave to appeal from the Governor in Council's confirmation of the award,—Held that the award was not such a judicial act as to come within the operation of s. 3 of the Statute 3 & 4 Will. 6. ——— Order confirming sale in execution—Order made on appeal—Letters Patent, cl. 39—24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15.—Certain property having been sold in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor applied to have the sale set aside. This application was rejected; but a review of the order rejecting it was subsequently granted, and the sale set aside, and an application by the auction-purchaser for the cancelment of the order setting aside the sale was refused. Thereupon the purchaser applied by petition to the High Court, praying that the order made on review might be reversed. In his petition he submitted that "the sale ought to have been confirmed" when the application of the judgment-debtor to have it set aside was first rejected, but the petition did not contain a formal prayer for confirmation of the sale. A rule, however, was granted, calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the order reversing the sale should not be set aside and the sale confirmed, which rule, after argument, was made absolute. The judgment-debtor having obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the order making the rule absolute, the purchaser objected that such order was not appealable under cl. 39 of the Letters Patent, 1865, on the ground that it was not an order "made on appeal." Held that, as the purchaser had obtained a rule calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the sale should not be confirmed, and had allowed that rule to be made absolute, he could not contend that the order making the rule absolute was not an order made on appeal. Semble—Orders made by the High Court under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, are subject to appeal to the Privy Council. 15. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 595 (a)—"Final decree."—Certain persons interested in an award applied under s. 525 of the Civil Procedure Code to have it filed in Court. The Court made an order under s. 526 "that the claim of the plaintiffs be decreed." The defendants appealed to the High Court from this "decree." The High Court held that the appeal would not lie, and suggested to the plaintiffs to apply to the lower Court to give judgment according to the award, and a decree to follow it. Thereupon the plaintiffs made an application to the lower Court of the nature suggested, but styled it one for review of judgment. The lower Court granted the so-called review of judgment. The defendants appealed from the order of the lower Court contending that the "review of judgment" had been improperly granted. On the 23rd June 1880 the High Court held that the order of the lower Court was not appealable, not being one passed on review of judgment, but on an application to give judgment and decree in accordance with an award which had been filed in Court. The defendants applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the order of the High Court of the 23rd June 1880. Held that such order was not a "final decree" within the meaning of s. 595 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code, and therefore it was not appealable to Her Majesty in Council. On the ground that a decree for an account was not final within that section, the High Court refused, under s. 601, to grant the defendant a certificate. On his application for special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, not by way of an appeal from the local Court's refusal, but asking for the exercise of the prerogative right to admit an appeal:—Held that, as leave could be granted on any other ground, should any appear, besides the ground that the Court had refused the certificate without good cause, while leave could also be granted on the latter ground, if established, to make this application was, perhaps, more convenient than to appeal from the order of refusal. Held, also, that the real question in this suit having been the liability of the defendant to account to the plaintiff upon several claims, the decree had decided this against the defendant in such a way that, although the account had not been taken, the decree was final within s. 495. L. R., 15 Bom., 155 : L. R., 18 I. A., 6,* referred to and followed. The certificate of which the grant was part of the procedure in the admission of such an appeal was refused by the High Court on the ground that the proposed appeal was from an order remanding a suit under s. 562, Civil Procedure Code; and that orders of remand under that section were, by the practice of the Court, treated as not final within s. 595, cl. (a). That practice is probably correct; but here the order only purported to be under s. 562, which was not applicable. The first Court had not disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point, so as to have excluded evidence of facts appearing to the Appellate Court essential; and s. 565 appeared to be applicable rather than s. 562. The Appellate Court had reversed once for all the decision of the first Court upon an issue as to the making and validity of a will, which issue governed the whole case. 31. ——— Non-production of succession certificate at the proper time—Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—Order granting application for execution of decree.—The representative of a decree-holder applied for execution of a decree without producing before the Court a certificate of succession as required by Act No. VII of 1889, s. 4. The Court to which the application was made granted execution. The judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court, by which the order of the lower Court was sustained upon production before it (the High Court) of the necessary certificate of succession. Held that an objection that the said application for execution was improperly granted by reason of the non-production of the succession certificate before the lower Court did not raise a "substantial question of law" within the meaning of s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure, so as to warn the High Court in granting leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council. 32. ——— Malicious prosecution, Suit for—Difference between trial in England by jury and in India without one—Concurrent judgments on facts.—The only question involved in a case for malicious prosecution is a question of fact. In England the jury would find the facts and the Judge would draw the inference from the findings of the jury, but where, as in India, the case is tried without a jury, there is only a question of fact to be determined by one and the same person. There was accordingly no substantial question of law in the case, and the High Court granted the certificate allowing the appeal under a misapprehension. MODY v. QUEEN INSURANCE CO. . . 4 C. W. Admiralty Rules.—By rule 35 of the rules respecting appeals from the Vice-Admiralty Courts abroad, made and ordained by King William IV in Council, in pursuance of the Statute 2 Will. IV, in c. 51, all appeals from the decrees of Vice-Admiralty Courts are to be asserted within fifteen days after the date of the decree. Held that the words "after the date of the decree" mean after the date when the decree is pronounced by the Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty Court, as the case may be, not the date when the decree is reduced to writing and signed. On the 23rd July 1880, the High Court in its Appellate Jurisdiction, modifying a decree of the High Court as a Court of Vice-Admiralty in a cause of damage by collision, referred it to the Registrar to assess the damages that had been incurred in reference to one of the ships, both of which were held to be in fault. The parties went, without protest, before the Registrar for that purpose, the impugnants also having taken out process to compel the appearance of the promovents before him, and the damages were assessed with the consent of both parties at a certain amount. On the 2nd September 1880, a notice of appeal was given on behalf of the impugnants, and was recorded as asserted pursuant to rule 35 above referred to. Held that the appeal was not within time, more than fifteen days having elapsed after the decree before the appeal was asserted. XVI of 1797, s. 4.*—Within six months after decree and prior to the admission of an appeal therefrom to England, the Sudder Court, on an ex-parte application without notice, issued an execution order putting the decree-holder in possession. This was done without calling for security as provided by s. 4, Bengal Regulattion XVI of 1797. The appellant, on the admission of the appeal, applied to the Sudder Court for security from the party in possession pending the appeal, but that Court held that, as the decree-holder was in possession under an execution order which could not be appealed from, they had no power to interfere. On petition the Judicial Committee, under the circumstances and on affidavit of waste, made an order declaring that it was competent to the Sudder Court to require security to be given for protection of the property pending the appeal, notwithstanding execution of the decree had issued, and gave permission to the appellant to apply to the Sudder Court with an intimation of that opinion. The sale was set aside by the High Court, and the purchaser was ousted. He preferred an appeal to the Privy Council, and the High Court directed that security be given for the mesne profits and the due delivery of the property without waste in the event of the appeal being successful. The present defendants furnished security, and executed a document under which the plaintiff, who had succeeded in the Privy Council, now sued to enforce his rights. It appeared that after the date of the instrument abovementioned a payment was made from the income of the property in satisfaction of a decree obtained by the zamindar against the present plaintiff for arrears of poruppu previously accrued due. Held (1) that the order of the High Court requiring security to be furnished was not ultra vires, and that the instrument abovementioned was enforceable; (2) that the defendants, who had given no personal guarantee, were not competent to put an end to the security under the provisions of the Contract Act relating to revocation of a surety; (3) that on the right construction of the instrument the period for the profits of which the defendants were chargeable was that between the date of the instrument and the date of the decision of the Privy Council; (4) that the defendants should be credited with the amount paid in satisfaction of the decree for poruppu. 109. ——— Effect of order of Privy Council dismissing suit on power of High Court to make orders in suit—Petition for the amendment of an order in Council dismissing a suit—Receiver's liability to account—Rights as between the Administrator-General and executors transferring estate to him, and the petitioner interested in the estate—Act II of 1874, s. 31.—A Court having appointed a receiver in a suit has authority, incidental to its jurisdiction, to order him to account, although the suit may be no longer pending. The estate is in its hands, and the receiver is its officer, and the dismissal of the suit by an Appellate Court does not alter that state of things. The original Court in such a case may permit parties interested to intervene on questions as to the accounts, and may deal with costs and other matters. In a suit by a plaintiff interested in the estate, wholly based on the alleged illegality of its transfer by the executors named in the will of a Hindu, to the Administrator-General (Act II of 1874, s. 31), decrees were made by the High Court, Original and Appellate, in the plaintiff's favour. The Judicial Committee, however, held the transfer legal; and the suit, brought against the Administrator-General and the executors as co-defendants, was dismissed. Held, on the plaintiff's petition for such modification of the order dismissing the suit as would maintain what had been ordered below relating to the accounts, thereby enabling the High Court to bring matters in dispute to an end, that there were no grounds for the amendment. Their Lordships' opinion was that the High Court would not be deprived of any jurisdiction in that respect by the dismissal of the suit. If it should be necessary to the carrying out of the transfer that the Administrator-General should take proceedings, he could do so. To make orders upon the Court's receiver was within its powers; and either the receiver or the executors could be called to further account without the petitioner being met by the defence of prior adjudication of the matter (s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure). At the close of the Judge's charge to the jury counsel for the first accused asked that the following points might be reserved for the decision of the Court under s. 434 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), viz.:—(1) Whether the order for the prosecution was sufficient under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code. 1. GENERAL DUTY OF APPELLATE COURTS.

1. ——— High Court, Practice of— Appeal on questions of fact—Credibility of witnesses.—The High Court, sitting in appeal on questions of fact, was guided by the same rules as those of the Privy Council when they sat upon motions for a rule for new trials from the old Supreme Court. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will not disturb a judgment upon a question as to the credibility of witnesses, unless it be manifestly clear, from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case, that the Court was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will look upon the decree of a Judge as to facts in the same light as the verdict of a jury; and, though some of the reasons given for the conclusion arrived at be erroneous, the High Court in appeal will not say that the decree is against the weight of evidence, if sufficient reason for such decree still remain. The Appellate Court, assuming that the appeal was one from the decree of the 27th April 1877, preferred beyond time, admitted it after time, and after hearing the case on its merits, gave a decree against M, and dismissed the suit as regards T. Held that the Appellate Court erred in assuming that the appeal was from the decree of the 27th April 1877, and that it was at liberty to admit it beyond time, the appeal being from the decree of the 29th June 1878, that decree being the one which had brought B before that Court as an appellant; and that the Appellate Court was not competent, on an appeal from the decree of the 29th June 1878, to reconsider the merits of the case against M, the appeal from the decree of the 27th April 1877 being barred by limitation, and that decree and the decree of the 29th June 1878 being separate and distinct, and not appealable in one memorandum of appeal from the latter decree. The objection was allowed, but the Court, at the same time, disposed of the case on the merits, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the lower Appellate Court affirmed the decree on the ground that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction in the matter. Held that, as there were materials on the record for the determination of the suit, the Judge should, with reference to s. 207 of the Rent Act, have disposed of the appeal on the merits. Debi Saran Lal v. *Debi Saran Upadhia, I. to Appellate Court.—The plaintiff, as purchaser at a Court's sale, sued in 1871 for possession of certain immoveable property, and tendered in evidence a sale certificate, dated 20th September 1865. The first Court decided against the plaintiff on the ground, among others, that the certificate was not registered, though registration of it was compulsory. The defendant objected that the khatas were not duly stamped. The Subordinate Judge held that the instruments were bonds, and as such admitted them in evidence on payment of the proper stamp duty and penalty under s. 34, proviso I, of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). At a subsequent stage of the same suit, his successor in office was of opinion that the khatas in question were promissory notes; that as such they could be stamped only at the date of their execution, and that they had been illegally admitted in evidence under s. 34, proviso I. He accordingly dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the instruments sued on were promissory notes, but held that, after they had once been admitted in evidence on payment of the stamp duty and penalty, the question of their admissibility could not be subsequently raised in the suit under proviso III to s. 34 of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). He therefore reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and remanded the case for trial on the merits. Against this order of remand defendants appealed to the High Court. Held that the promissory notes, having been once admitted in evidence, could not afterwards be rejected on the ground of their not being duly stamped. cause of action against the sixth. The Assistant Judge, in whose Court the suit was brought, tried one of the causes of action, over which he had jurisdiction, but refused to try the other, over which he had no jurisdiction. In appeal, the District Judge refused to enter into the merits of either on the ground of the misjoinder of the causes of action. Held that the District Judge was bound to enter into the merits of the claim over which the Court of first instance had jurisdiction, it not being affected by the error in the misjoinder of the two claims. 151. ———— Misjoinder of causes of action—Property wrongly attached—Joint suit by holders of two shares to have their shares declared not liable to attachment—Civil Procedure Code, s. 578—Amendment of plaint.—A decree-holder, in execution of a decree against one G L, attached a house as belonging to G L and his two sons forming a joint Hindu family. The sons objected that the house had previously been partitioned, and was held by them and their father in separate shares, but their objection was disallowed. They then brought a joint suit for a declaration that their respective portions of the house were not liable to attachment in execution of a decree against their father. No objection was taken to the frame of that suit, and the Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree on the finding that partition had in fact taken place prior to the suit in which the defendant, judgment-creditor, had obtained his decree. On appeal by the judgment-creditor, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit entirely on the grounds of misjoinder of causes of action. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, on these facts, that the plaintiffs should have been allowed to amend their plaint by striking out the name of one of them, and that, though there was irregularity in the procedure, such irregularity did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons.

The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews in 1891, describing himself, being allowed to amend his plaint, as managing coparcener and representative of the joint family. A plea of non-joinder was raised, inter alia, on the ground that the plaintiff had an undivided brother:—Held that since the plaint (as amended) showed that the plaintiff sued as managing member of his undivided family, the omission to join his brother was a merely formal error, and was not fatal to the suite. 162. ——— Improper exercise of discretion in granting declaratory decrees—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 578.—The awarding of declaratory relief as regulated by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act is a discretionary power which Courts of equity are empowered to exercise with reference to the circumstances of each case and the nature of the facts stated in the plaint, and the prayer of the plaintiff; that so long as a Court of first instance possesses jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory suit, and, entering into the merits of the case, arrives at right conclusions and awards a declaratory decree, such a decree cannot be reversed in appeal simply because the discretion has been improperly exercised; and that such improper exercise of discretion under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act has no higher footing than that of an error, defect, or irregularity, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, within the meaning of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. This does not imply that, even in cases where the discretionary power to award declaratory relief has been exercised wholly arbitrarily, and in a manner grossly inconsistent with judicial principles, the Court of Appeal would have no power to interfere. Ram Kanaye Chuckerbutty v. *Prosunno Coomar Sein, 13 W. The first Court gave the plaintiff a decree, and this decree was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge, who, however, gave no reasons of his own for his judgment, but merely adopted those of the lower Court. Held that, having regard to the nature of the case and the simplicity of the point for determination, the fact of the District Judge having omitted to state his reasons did not amount to such an error of law within the meaning of s. 857 of the Code of Civil Procedure as affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. The Courts below concurred in finding that there was sufficient evidence of the execution of the document by the pardanashin lady with full knowledge of its contents. From their judgments it appeared that, if the defendant had been examined on commission and had given her testimony in support of her written statement, it would not have been believed, and in their Lordships' opinion it could not reasonably have prevailed. Held that the error alleged by the appellant to have occurred in the refusal of the Court to issue the commission (whether or not it would have been better to have issued it) was, at all events, no valid ground of appeal. The defendant did not appeal or file cross-objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff not appealing under s. 588 (28) from the order of remand. The first Court then dismissed the whole suit, and, on appeal by the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court, held (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order of remand, though it had not been specially appealed against; (ii) that the order of remand was ultra vires, so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree which was favourable to the plaintiff, the lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction, in the absence of any appeal or objections by the defendant, to disturb that part of the decree; (iii) that the order of remand was not made valid by the subsequent appearance of the plaintiff before the first Court or by the appeal from the first Court's decree on the remand; and (iv) that the case was not

He did not make the purchaser a party to such application. The Court of first instance dismissed the application. On appeal, the Appellate Court made the purchaser a party to the proceedings, and, holding that there was irregularity in conducting the sale, reversed the order of the Court of first instance. Held that the Appellate Court was wrong in so holding upon evidence recorded by the Court of first instance when the purchaser was not a party to the proceedings, and the order of the Appellate Court was set aside under s. 622 of the Code. 201. ——— Want of cause of action—Grounds for rejecting plaint—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 53.—In a suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title in respect of land, where the plaint did not disclose any facts from which it could be said that the defendants denied the plaintiff's title, but from the proceedings in the original cause it was established that, before the suit was brought, there was a dispute existing between the parties as regards the title, and that a decree in favour of the plaintiffs had been passed by the original Court on the merits of the case:—Held that, though the plaint might have been rejected in the first instance under s. 53 of the Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that it did not disclose any cause of action, it was too late for an Appellate Court to reverse the decree solely on that ground, without being satisfied that no such cause of action was established on the evidence. 202. ——— Power of the Court of Appeal to vary decrees appealed from in consequence of circumstances occurring subsequently to the date of such decrees—Partition suit—Death of a co-parcener pendente lite.—When the decree of a subordinate Court is under appeal to the High Court, it is open to the High Court to vary it either in points in which it is erroneous or in respect of matters occurring subsequently to the date of such decree which are admitted. The plaintiff obtained a decree in a partition suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court for his share in certain joint family property in the possession of the defendants (his co-parceners). The decree was affirmed on appeal. The defendants filed a second appeal in the High Court, but, before it was decided, one of the defendants died. The plaintiff at the hearing of the second appeal claimed a larger share in the family property than he had been awarded by the decree of the Courts below. Held that he (plaintiff) was entitled to a share in that of the co-parcener who died pendente lite, and that the decree appealed from ought to be varied accordingly. 203. ——— Power to vary decree as made in the lower Court—Decree confined to rights in issue between parties—S. 565 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877.—After the trial of issues raising the question whether the plaintiff was, or the defendants were, entitled to zamindari rights in certain mehals, a decree was made affirming the title of the plaintiff, the evidence in support of the defendant's case being discredited, and the latter were declared by the decree to be the "plaintiff's under-tenure-holders of the said mehals." This was modified on appeal by the declaration that "the defendants are patnidars of the same mouzahs." Held that it was unnecessary on this appeal to consider whether the Appellate Court was right in its conclusion that the defendants were patnidars; because, upon the case which had been set up for the defendants, and upon the issues framed and tried in the lower Court, the Appellate Court could not properly make such a declaration: the defendants could not be in a better position than they would have been in had they claimed to be patnidars, in which case an issue as to that title would have been framed and tried. S. 565 of Act X of 1877 does not enable an Appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties, where no issue has been fixed on the point, and the right has not been set up in the lower Court. The defendant appealed to the District Court, but in appeal raised no question as to the extent of the share awarded to the plaintiff. On second appeal to the High Court, it was contended that, in any event, the plaintiff was only entitled to a fifth share. Held that, under the circumstances and having regard to the nature of the question, the point might be taken in second appeal on behalf of the defendant, and the High Court varied the decree by awarding the plaintiff a fifth share instead of a fourth share, but ordered the appellant (defendant) to bear his own costs of the appeal. The suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts. Held that, as plaintiff went to trial in the Courts below upon one issue only, viz., whether D and B were ever really in occupation, he was not entitled in special appeal to complain that evidence had not been taken as to the passing of consideration-money. Held that, as no issue was raised in the lower Courts which could have been the foundation for a declaration of right, the non-decision of a claim to such a declaration could not be made a ground of special appeal. Held that where the question whether the alienation of certain property by the father without the son's consent was valid under the Mitakshara law was not raised in the lower Courts, such invalidity could not be admitted as a ground of objection in special appeal, for it necessarily involved an issue of fact. 240. ——— Objection not taken before as being unnecessary.—A suit for enhancement of rent was defended on two grounds, the first of which was overruled, but the second succeeded, and the suit was dismissed. Plaintiff appealed, and the second ground having been overruled in appeal, the respondent (defendant) again put forward the objection which had been overruled by the first Court. Held that, under the circumstances, it was not too late for him to take that objection. 243. ——— Objection to mode of recording evidence.—The objection that the depositions of the witnesses were not taken in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure, but only notes of the evidence, is not one which can be taken in special appeal. LALL MAHOMED v. PEER NUZUR . . . . . 18 W. R., 112

244. ——— Documents, though inadmissible, admitted in first Court by consent—Documents not objected to in first Court—Appeal.—Judgments not inter partes, though not conclusive as res judicata, are admissible in evidence under s. 13 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) to show the conduct of the parties, or particular instances of the exercise of a right, or admissions made by the parties or their predecessors in title, or to identify property, or to show how it has been previously dealt with. Where parties to a suit, in order to save delay or expense or for any other reason, have agreed or not objected to the admission of certain evidence given in some former proceedings, although it is not strictly admissible, and the first Court has allowed this to be done, it is not open to the Appellate Court to take objection to such a procedure and exclude the evidence. LAKSHMAN GOVIND v. AMRIT GOPAL [I. L. R., 24 Bom., 591

245. ——— Objection as to admissibility of evidence.—It being objected in special appeal that the decision of the lower Appellate Court was based on documents which were neither admissible as legal evidence nor had any bearing on the point to be decided,—Held that, though the objection to the admissibility of the evidence ought to have been taken in the Court in which the evidence was tendered, yet coming in such a shape as it did, it could not be got over. Held also (MITTER, J., dissentiente) that, as defendant has succeeded in special appeal on an objection which he should have taken before, he ought to pay his own costs in this appeal, even should he succeed ultimately (the case being remanded); and that it is not the exclusive duty of a Court, but that of pleaders also, to see whether evidence tendered is legally admissible. 247. ——— Objection as to admissibility of evidence.—Where no objection had been taken as to the admissibility of documentary evidence,—viz., a decree and other proceedings in regard to that decree, which had been made use of by the opposite party,—an Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to exclude it. Where defendant allows, without objection, a purchaser of a plaintiff's interest in the suit to substitute his name on the record under an order of Court, he cannot afterwards contend that the suit is thereby abated. Where the lower Appellate Court's judgment is good, and its adjudication of a plaintiff's right has been based on a sound principle, the High Court will not allow a new point to be taken in special appeal which was not taken in either of the Courts below. 271. ——— Summary suit for possession.—A and B obtained a decree for possession of land against C. On their proceeding to execute their decree, D, who was in possession, presented a petition to the Munsif, complaining that they were thereby attempting unlawfully to interfere with his possession. The case was tried, on remand from the Judge, as a suit under the provisions of s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, per JACKSON, J., that, as the decree-holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant, the case did not fall within s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859; and, therefore, the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. Per MITTER, J.—This objection, taken for the first time on special appeal, did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. 272. ——— Objection to suit for mesne profits as being matter for execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244.—A landlord sued his tenant for arrears of rent, and obtained a decree for a certain amount and a declaration that, if the amount were not paid within fifteen days, the tenant should be ejected under s. 52, Act VIII of 1869. The amount was not paid, and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed, and succeeded in getting the decree set aside, and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced and a decree made, directing that, if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days, he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days, and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsif's Court to recover mesne profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie, as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, as the suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court and the Munsif, under the circumstances of the case, was the officer who, in the first instance, would have had to determine the matter in the execution department, there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsif which he did not possess, and that upon the authority of the decision in Purmessuree Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Kooer, 19 W. R., 90, this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. Held also that, the point being one that was not raised in the pleadings or before either of the lower Courts, and being a point which went exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Court, it could not be raised on second appeal. 277. ——— Jurisdiction—Suit for property wrongly taken in execution of decree—Separate suit brought where proceeding should have been in execution.—Where a suit for the recovery of lands taken by the decree-holder in excess of his decree has been held not to lie under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, but the suit had been instituted in the Court which had jurisdiction to execute the decree, the plaint may be regarded as an application to that Court for determining the question whether the lands are covered by the decree, and the suit does not therefore fail for want of jurisdiction. Purmessuree Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Kooer, 19 W. R., 90, and Azizuddin Hossein v. *Ramanugra Roy, I. L. 286. ——— Minority—Right of member of family to alienate.—A plaintiff obtained a decree to set aside an alienation of ancestral property effected by his father during his minority. Defendant objected in special appeal, first, that the suit was barred by lapse of time since plaintiff attained his majority; and, secondly, that, under the Mitakshara law, the father had a right to alienate a share of the property. Held that, as the first of these objections was entirely a matter of fact, and as the second, though essentially a matter of law, went to the substance of the plaintiff's claim, they should have been urged in the lower Courts, and could not be admitted for the first time in special appeal. 287. ——— Settlement.—In the first Court an issue was raised whether or not the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated in the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it, for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. On appeal the question of limitation was not raised, but on the merits the Judge also found against A. On special appeal by A, B took an objection under s. 348 of Act VIII of 1859 that A's suit was barred. Held that B could not take the objection at that stage. The plaintiff, on appeal before the Judge, did not raise the objection that the Munsif ought not to have entertained the petition of the defendant, as it had not been presented in due time. 6. ——— Contract Act, ss. 60, 74.—In consideration of an advance of ₹118, the defendant executed, in favour of the plaintiff, a mortgage-bond, dated 3rd November 1879, by which it was stipulated that the amount should be repaid "in kind by delivery of half the amount of the rubbi crops of every description produced at the first-class rates; and in case the same is not paid in kind, it will be paid principal with interest from the date of execution at one anna per cent. per mensem in cash in the month of Baisakh 1287 F. S. (April 1880). The defendants admitted execution of the bond, and pleaded payments in grain to the amount of ₹136, which they failed to prove. It was found that the plaintiff had received payments in grain to the extent of ₹71, more than half of which, however, he claimed to be entitled to appropriate to the payment of other antecedent debts which were due to him by the defendants. It was not stated at the time of payment towards which debt the payments were to be applied, but all the payments were admittedly made in kind. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to appropriate the payments to the antecedent debts, inasmuch as, within the meaning of s. 60 of the Contract Act, there were "other circumstances" indicating that the payments were made in liquidation of the amount of the bond. 7. ——— Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 60—Creditor's appropriation of payments to one or other of debts.—One of two mortgages bore interest at 12 per cent. on the mortgage debt payable with costs, and the other carried simple interest. Payments made by the debtor had been appropriated by the creditor to payment of the interest on the bond bearing simple interest, while the compound interest, on the other hand, had been left to accumulate. In a suit, brought against the representative of the debtor after his decease, to enforce the mortgage bearing compound interest, the objection was taken to the appropriation by the creditor. Held that the rule in s. 60 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, follows the ordinary law in prescribing a rule as to the case in which the creditor may, at his discretion, apply, to one or other of the debts due to him, payments made by the debtor. A reluctance shown by the debtor to agree to pay compound interest, before he executed the mortgage bond at such interest, was not an indication, within that section, that he intended that application of his payments should be made first to that bond. C., 526*, referred to. A, B, M, R, and N were tried together on a charge under s. 460 of the Penal code. The principal evidence against all of them was that of an approver. Against A, B, and M there was the further evidence that they produced certain portions of the property stolen on the night of the crime from the house where the crime was committed. With regard to R, it was proved that he was present when B pointed out the place where some of the property was dug up, but he did not appear to have said anything or given any directions about it. Held, with reference to A, B, and M, that it could not be said that their recent possession of part of the stolen property, so soon after it had been stolen, was not such corroboration of the approver's evidence of their participation in the crime as entitled the Court to act upon his story in regard to those particular persons. Held that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient material to warrant the inference of guilty knowledge on R's part, and with regard to N no property was found with him or produced through his instrumentality, both R and N ought to have been acquitted. 16. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 349—Acquittal of prisoner—Withdrawal of pardon granted to approver after judgment of acquittal—Conviction on trial improperly originated, Power of High Court to set aside.—At a Sessions trial the Judge, after acquitting the prisoner, passed an order withdrawing a pardon already granted to an approver, who had given his evidence as such approver before the Sessions Court, and ordered his commitment. The approver was charged, tried, and found guilty. Held by MITTER, J., that the order withdrawing the pardon and committing the approver was contrary to the provisions of s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the words "before judgment has been passed" being words inserted in the section to put a limit to the time within which the power of withdrawal of the pardon conferred in the Court of Sessions may be actually exercised; and that therefore the trial of the approver was illegal. The power of directing commitments conferred upon the Sessions Court by s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code can be exercised only before judgment has been passed. Held by MACLEAN, J., that it is not necessary that the order should be made before judgment is passed, but that it must appear to the Judge before he passes judgment that the conditions of the pardon have not been complied with; and that in the present case it was impossible to hold that, because the actual order of commitment of the accused was written (although in the judgment) after the acquittal, therefore it did not appear to the Judge before passing judgment that there were grounds for his order. SRINOP v. EMPRESS . . 12 C. L. R., 226

19. ——— Tender of pardon, Effect of—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 337, 339—Accomplice—Subsequent trial of accomplice for connected offences.—A prisoner charged before a Magistrate at Benares with offences punishable under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code made a confession to the Magistrate in respect of those offences. He was then sent in custody to Calcutta, and was there, together with other persons, charged before a Magistrate with offences punishable under ss. 467, 473, and 475. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first-mentioned had reference. Under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the conditions specified in that section, and the prisoner accepted the pardon, and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated, and accordingly discharged all the accused, but the pardon was not withdrawn, and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statements or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was tendered. Subsequently the prisoner was committed by the Magistrate of Benares for trial before the Court of Sessions upon the charges under ss. 471, 472, and 474 of the Penal Code. He pleaded not guilty, but did not in terms plead the pardon as a bar to the trial, though he made some reference to the subject; and the Sessions Judge, having made a brief inquiry as to the proceedings at Calcutta, came to the conclusion that there was no sufficient proof of any conditional pardon, and convicted and sentenced the accused. Held that by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate, the conditions of which were satisfied, as was shown by its never having been withdrawn, the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss. 471, 472, and 474, and was not liable to be proceeded against in respect of them, and that the trial and conviction were, therefore, illegal. Although s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not in terms cover a case where a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry for committal against several persons tenders a conditional pardon to one of them, examines him as a witness, and subsequently discharges all the accused for want of a primâ facie case against them, the words "every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case" mean that for all purposes (subject to failure to satisfy the conditions of the pardon as provided for by s. 339) such a person ceases to be triable for the offence or offences under inquiry or (with reference to s. 339) for "any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter," while making "a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences" directly under inquiry. The words last quoted refer to the importance, when a pardon is tendered, of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details, so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how far the pardon protects him, and what portion of it should not protect him, ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANGA CHARAN . . I. L. 3. ——— s. 32—Waiver of irregularity—Well in mill compound.—Manufactory.—By a Government notification of the 3rd of June 1863, published in the Gazette, it was declared, under the provisions of Act VI of 1857, that a certain strip of land passing by the mill of the defendants was required for a public purpose,—the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway,—a plan of which land was to be seen in the Collector's office. On the 4th of November following, the secretary of the defendants' company received a notice signed by the Collector, requiring the owner of the mill to call at the Collector's office to signify his acceptance or otherwise of the compensation for the land required. The secretary went to the Collector's office, and there saw a plan, from which it appeared that an adjoining well from which the engine of the mill was supplied with water was intended to be taken, but no compensation for the well or land required was then agreed upon. On the 28th November a notice signed by the Collector was served on the defendants, stating that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government, and requiring the defendants to appoint an arbitrator also; the defendants in reply stated that they had already appointed an arbitrator. Held that the defendants had, by appointing their arbitrator to determine the compensation for the land required, waived any irregularity in the previous proceedings, and precluded themselves from claiming to have the whole manufactory taken under s. 32, Act VI of 1857, though no proceedings were taken in the arbitration for nearly twelve months subsequently, and the defendants had shortly before such proceedings made such a claim. XXXVII—Kabuliat, Suit for.*— Notwithstanding that Chapter XXXVII of Act X of 1877 in reference to arbitration does not refer specially to suits brought under Act X of 1859, yet if both parties to a suit for a kabuliat brought under the latter Act agree to refer the matters in dispute between them to certain arbitrators named by them, and file a joint petition in the Court of the Deputy Collector, stating that they had so agreed, and praying that the case may be referred to such arbitrators, neither of them will be afterwards at liberty to object to a decree made, embodying the award of the arbitrators on the ground that the reference to arbitration was irregular, and not warranted by any of the provisions of Act X of 1877. When a case has been so referred, the arbitrators are at liberty to determine what appears to them to be a fair and equitable rate of rent, and, notwithstanding the amount so found is less than that demanded by the plaintiff in his plaint, the Court out of which the reference issued is not at liberty on that ground to dismiss the suit, but is bound to order the defendant (with the alternative of eviction) to execute a kabuliat in favour of the plaintiff, engaging himself to pay rent to the plaintiff at the rate determined by the arbitrators to be fair and equitable. 7. ——— Award—Decision by majority without such provision in the award.—Plaintiff brought this suit to obtain a decree dismissing defendants, committee and manager of a certain pagoda, from their offices on the ground of malversation. The Court made an order expressed to be by consent of the parties concerned, and in exercise of the Court's discretionary power under s. 16 of Act XX of 1863, referring the matters in difference to three arbitrators for final determination, the said arbitrators "to make their award in writing and submit the same" within a certain period. Each arbitrator delivered a separate award in writing, two arbitrators finding for the plaintiff. The Civil Judge made a decree in accordance with the award of the majority of the arbitrators. The first defendant appealed on the grounds (1) that he had not consented to the arbitration, and (2) that there being no provision in the order of reference to the effect that the finding of a majority of the arbitrators should prevail, there was no valid award. Held that in this case the order of the Judge was valid without the assent of the persons to be bound; that he might, when he made the order, have inserted as a provision that the decision of the majority should be that of the body; and that there was no reason why his ratification of that mode of decision, wholly within his discretion, should not be equivalent to a previous command. arbitration comes within s. 523 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and may be filed under that section. The section is not confined to cases in which a dispute actually existing at date of agreement is agreed to be referred to arbitration. But the agreement must name the arbitrator or arbitrators, and an agreement which provides for the future appointment or election of arbitrators does not fall within the section. The effect of the last clause of s. 523 is to give the parties to such an agreement power to nominate the arbitrator, even when they have agreed that he shall be appointed by the Court. An executor having propounded a will applied for probate, a caveat was filed denying the execution of the alleged will, and the matter was duly registered as a suit. The executor and the caveatrix subsequently referred "the dispute" to arbitration, and an award was made that the alleged will had not been executed. The executor nevertheless subsequently continued the suit. At the hearing the caveatrix pleaded the award, and contended that it was binding on the plaintiff (executor). The plaintiff (executor) contended that the Court as a Court of Probate had no jurisdiction to try any question as to the award, but was limited only to the question of the execution of the will. Held per CANDY, J., that the Court had jurisdiction to determine the question as to the award. Held also that the award was binding on the executor. 37. ——— Appointment of sole arbitrator in place of four—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 315, 318, 319—Recall of reference—Consent—Appointment of substitute for arbitrator.—In a suit for a partnership account, the matters in dispute were, by an order dated the 19th April 1877, referred by consent to four persons and an umpire, the award to be made within five months. Some steps were taken in the reference, but the arbitrators failed to make their award within the time limited, and meanwhile the umpire died. After negotiations for appointment of a fresh arbitrator and enlargement of the time had failed, the plaintiff moved that "the order of the 9th April 1877" might be recalled, and that the matters in dispute might be referred to the arbitration of such person or persons as the Court might be pleased to admit, or be tried and determined by the Court. The defendant opposed the application. An order was, however, made on the 29th May 1878 that the order of the 19th April 1877 should be recalled, and that all matters in difference between the parties should be referred to C D, who should make his award in writing within three months, or within such further time as the said C D might think necessary. Certain provisions as to the payment of costs were also made. Held that the order of the 19th May was not an order recalling the reference under s. 318, and then referring it afresh under s. 315 of Act VIII of 1859, but an order under s. 319 appointing a new arbitrator in the place of the old ones, for which the consent of all parties was not necessary. 53. ——— Power of arbitrators to deal with question of costs—Excess in award.—The parties to a suit having referred the matters in dispute between them to arbitration, the arbitrators, without being specially authorized to decide the question of costs, included in the award a direction that the defendant should pay the costs of the plaintiff. On the application of the plaintiff the Subordinate Judge, under s. 526 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ordered the award to be filed, holding that the arbitrators had as such an implied power to deal with the costs. The defendant applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction, praying that the record of the case might be sent for, and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. Held that the arbitrators had no implied power to deal with the question of costs, and that on the defendant's objection the Subordinate Judge should have refused to file the award. Under the circumstances, the High Court, instead of setting aside the order to file the award, directed the award to stand good, except so far as it awarded costs, and that the decree should be drawn in accordance with it, as it would be if it contained no direction as to costs. ss. 35, 508, 514.—The provision contained in s. 508 of the Civil Procedure Code, requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the delivery of the award, is not imperative, but directory, and non-compliance with it does not make the order of reference abortive and any subsequent arbitration proceedings ineffectual and bad. No order for enlarging that time was made. The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on May 22nd, 1867, and four subsequent meetings were held, at which all the parties attended, and evidence was taken; at the last of which meetings, namely, on 27th July, an objection for the first time was taken on behalf of the defendant that the time limited by the order of reference had expired, but the arbitrators proceeded with the reference. The award was made on 12th August 1867, and remained with one of the arbitrators until his death in August 1868. Subsequently it was produced by the other arbitrator, on the application of the parties to the suit, and delivered to the successful party, by whom it was brought into Court on the 10th May 1870, and judgment was moved for in accordance therewith. Held that the arbitrators had authority to make the award. The award was properly submitted to the Court. S. 320, Act VIII of 1859, does not make it necessary for the arbitrators to submit the award to the Court personally. Submission to the Court under s. 320 is not necessary to the completion of an award under ss. 315 and 318. 66. ——— Refusal of arbitrator to reconsider award.—The plaintiff in this suit sued the defendants to recover certain moneys presented to him on his marriage, which he alleged the defendants had received and appropriated to their own use. The defendants denied that they had received such moneys, but admitted that such moneys had been credited by the plaintiff's father to the firm in which they, the plaintiff and the plaintiff's father, were jointly interested, against a larger amount of moneys belonging to the firm which had been expended on the plaintiff's marriage. The parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration, and to abide by the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided that the plaintiff could not recover the money he sued for, and which had been credited to the firm of which he was a partner, as a larger sum had been expended on his marriage out of the funds of the firm. The plaintiff obtained the opinions of certain pandits to the effect that, under Hindu law, gifts on marriage are regarded as separate acquisitions, and prayed that the Munsif would remit the award with these opinions to the arbitrator. The Munsif remitted the award with the opinions, requesting the arbitrator to consider them, and to return his opinion in writing within a certain period. The arbitrator having refused to act further, the Munsif proceeded to determine the suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree on the ground that, in a joint Hindu family, presents received on marriage do not fall into the common fund. Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting) that, there being no illegality apparent on the face of the award, the Munsif was not justified in remitting the award, or in setting the award aside and proceeding to determine the suit himself, but that he should have passed judgment in accordance with the award. The Munsif remitted the award to the arbitrator for determination of the other matters arising in the case; the arbitrator, however, refused to act further in the matter, and the Munsif himself took up the case and decided it in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge held that the award made by the arbitrator was sufficient for the determination of the case, and reversed the decision of the Munsif and gave the defendants a decree in terms of the award. Held that, as the plaintiffs and the defendants claimed under one and the same landlord, and the question between them being which of the two had the better title to the land in dispute, the case could not have been concluded by the finding of the arbitrator upon the question of possession, and that the Munsif had acted rightly, on the arbitrator declining to complete the award, in deciding the case himself. 69. ——— Omission of arbitrator to carry out terms of reference—Suit for partition and to take accounts—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 2, 520, 522, 523—Filing agreement to refer to arbitration in Court—"Decree."—The sharers of a joint undivided estate agreed in writing that such estate should be partitioned, and the accounts thereof settled by arbitration, and named one of such sharers as arbitrator, and agreed that he should settle all the accounts, show the surplus at each sharer's credit, and prepare lots, after partition of the lands and houses comprehended in such estate, and have them drawn within one year from the completion of the partition. Subsequently one of such sharers applied, under s. 523 of Act X of 1877, to have such agreement filed in Court. The other sharers not objecting to this course, such agreement was filed accordingly, and the case was referred to such arbitrator. The arbitrator made an award whereby he partitioned such estate into lots, assigning some only of such lots by name, and wherein he stated that he had not been able to settle the accounts owing to the default of the parties; and that, considering that the partition should take effect without any delay, he did not ask for further time. He further stated that "all the parties state that they will adjust the accounts after renewing the agreement," and he requested that the unassigned lots might be drawn in Court. The Court made an order confirming the award, and, it being objected that the settlement of the accounts should not be postponed, but that they should be settled as agreed, directed that the arbitrator should settle the accounts, and gave him a year's time for that purpose, and, some of the parties not being willing to draw the unassigned lots, directed the distribution of such lots "in reference to the age and number" of the sharers. Held that such order was a "decree" within the meaning of ss. 2 and 522 of Act X of 1877, that the arbitrator should himself have drawn such lots, or he should have made the parties draw them; but, inasmuch as it would not have strained the agreement to have had such lots drawn in Court and no objection had been taken to the arbitrator not having himself drawn them, it was not incumbent on the Court to have remitted the award in order that the arbitrator might have drawn them, that the Court, however, should not have distributed such lots in the manner it had done, but should have drawn a lot for each person; and in acting as it had done, it had acted contrary to the award, and for that reason its decree could not be maintained, and that, in confirming the award before the accounts had been settled and an award made in respect thereof, the Court had acted erroneously, inasmuch as the award had left undetermined a very important matter, viz., the settlement of the accounts; and the Court should, under s. 520 of Act X of 1877, have remitted the award for the reconsideration of the arbitrator; and, as it had the power to remit it upon such terms as it thought fit, the Court could have allowed one year, if necessary, for the settlement of the accounts; and on this account, and also because the Court had made an order postponing the settlement of the accounts, and thereby made an order contrary to, and in excess of, the award, its decree must be reversed. The award was remitted on the ground that the arbitrators had not determined the issues Nos. 1, 2, 5, and 6. Held (1) the legality of an order remitting an award for the reconsideration of the arbitrators may be challenged on appeal against the decree ultimately passed; and (2) that the award ought not to have been remitted: there was no illegality on the face of it, and there was a decision on the whole matter in issue between the parties. Mothooranath Tewaree v. *Brindabun Tewaree, 14 W. It was signed by both defendants and by the plaintiffs' pleader. As the plaintiffs' pleader had not been "specially authorized in writing" to join in the application, the Court postponed making any order on the application till the 23rd idem. On that day the first defendant did not attend the Court, but the plaintiffs' pleader produced the requisite authority, and the Court made an order referring the suit to the decision of the arbitrator nominated in the application of the 19th. On 27th June the first defendant made an application to the Court to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator in his place, on the ground that, after signing the application of the 19th, he had become aware of certain circumstances connected with the arbitrator which showed that he was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him. No final order was made upon this application till after the submission of the award, when it was rejected on the ground that the charges of misconduct and partiality imputed to the arbitrator were not made out. Held, first, that the first defendant not having objected to the appointment of the arbitrator on or before the 23rd June 1884, when the order of reference was made, must be taken to have tacitly acquiesced in the course adopted by the Court, and that such acquiescence amounted to a fresh submission. Ardesar Hormosji Wadia v. Secretary of State for India, 9 Bom., 177, and Sreenath Ghose v. Raj Chunder Paul, 8 W. R., 171, followed. The objections raised by the first defendant could only be considered after the submission of the award, and then only to the extent permitted by s. 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). When once a matter is referred to arbitration, it is not competent to the Court, under the second paragraph of s. 508 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to "deal with" the matter in difference between the parties, except as provided in Ch. XXXVII of the Code. There is no section of that chapter which authorizes the Court to revoke the authority conferred on an arbitrator and to appoint a new one except in cases falling strictly within the purview of s. 510 of the Code, where "the scope and object of the reference cannot be executed." It is only in those cases, apparently, that the authority conferred on arbitrators can be revoked "for good cause," the cause being such as is contemplated in that section, as where "an arbitrator refuses, or neglects, or becomes incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return to India at an early date." The enactment of the second paragraph of s. 508 of the Code of 1882, which does not occur in the corresponding section (315) of Act VIII of 1859, has the effect of rigidly restricting the Courts to the exact procedure laid down when dealing with cases in which the appointment of a new arbitrator becomes necessary. Before J was examined, the defendants objected to the case being decided in accordance with J's evidence, but the Court disallowed the objection, and, having taken J's statement on oath, decided the case in accordance therewith. Held by STUART, C.J., that the provisions of ss. 8 to 12 of Act X of 1873 were not applicable to the reference of the case to J; that such reference was in the nature of a reference to arbitration under the Code of Civil Procedure; that it would have been valid and binding on the parties had all the defendants joined in it; but that, as all the defendants did not do so, the proceedings were illegal, and they should be set aside and the suit be decided on the merits. Held by OLDFIELD, J., that the reference of the case to J was not made under or governed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to arbitration, and therefore the defendants were competent to revoke the agreement; and that, assuming the reference was made under the provisions of the Oaths Act, there was no rule of law prohibiting the revocation of such a reference, and therefore the defendants were competent to revoke the same. The arbitrators had only one meeting, at which an agreement was come to by the parties to settle all matters in dispute among themselves and withdraw the matters from arbitration, which was accordingly done, but nothing appeared to have been afterwards done. No award was made by the original arbitrators within six months from the reference. On application by the plaintiff to have the suit restored to the file of the Court,—Held that the suit was still pending, the arbitrators not having determined it while they had jurisdiction to do so, and it was ordered that it should be brought again before the Court. Where an award, which was of the nature of a family settlement between a father, mother, and son of certain property which had been given by the father to the mother in lieu of dower and then by the mother to the son, directed that a certain annuity should be paid out of the property to the father and mother "ta haiyát walidain," it was held that the annuity was to be paid during the joint lives of the father and mother and also during the life of the survivor. Two widows of a deceased Hindu referred generally to arbitrators the question of their rights, respectively, in the estate of their deceased husband, including the matter whether there was, or was not, any cause disentitling the widow who afterwards brought this suit for her share in the estate against the other who had obtained possession of the whole. The arbitrators declared her to be disentitled to succeed to any portion of the estate, and awarded her maintenance only. Held that, in the absence of mistake or misconduct on the part of the arbitrators, the award was binding on the parties. That officer appointed arbitrators who subsequently made the following award: "Having in the presence of the karpurdazes of both parties taken down the depositions of the witnesses of both parties on the disputed locality and made investigation and enquiry on the spot, and having observed the aspect of the place, we have ascertained as follows." They then proceeded to state the boundary. "Going along west from the high peak of Sathoo Pahar, which is on the south of Luphapara, one comes to a gurh called Rajgurh; on the south of it is Doobhiadidi in Mahomedabad; on the north of that gurh is Kolarkoonda in Belputta; on the west of it is Perma hill; on the east, south, and west is Mahomedabad; on the north is Belputta." At the foot of the award were the words, "Decision of the arbitrators confirmed," dated and signed by the Deputy Collector. The parties to the award afterwards petitioned the Settlement Officer to lay pillars along the line settled by the arbitrators, but he refused the application, but made an order that, "if the petitioners construct the pillars themselves, there will be no likelihood of objection hereafter. It is not necessary for the Court to pass any order in this matter." Held (1) that both parties had accepted the award; (2) that the award was not ambiguous; (3) that the effect of the award was not merely to determine possession at the time, but to determine the right to the land itself. award by which the arbitrator, to whom the question of the defendants' liability under the mortgage and certain cross-claims which the defendants urged against the plaintiff had been referred, had found that the plaintiff was entitled to a particular sum under the mortgage for principal, but that, as a Mahomedan, he was not entitled to any sum for interest. The plaintiff contended that the award was bad Held, on appeal, that the plaintiff was not entitled, by reason of interest having been disallowed, to treat the award as a nullity, that the omission by the arbitrator to allow interest was a mistake which might be rectified by the Court, and that the award must be taken to be binding on the plaintiff. Held, further, that the plaintiff was entitled to proceed on the mortgage, and that the sum found due by the award having been a portion of the mortgage debt, the plaintiff was entitled to the usual mortgage decree for the sum found due with interest at 24 per cent. from the date of the award. 99. ———— Maintenance, Grant of villages for—Nature of grant, whether absolute or resumable.—A grant of villages was made by a talukhdar to his younger son for maintenance. The elder son inherited the family talukh. In the next generation, in 1869, an award was made by a body of Oudh talukhdars as arbitrators on the submission of the disputants, who directed that the village "given as maintenance be decreed in favour of the grantee to continue as heretofore." The questions raised in that award were whether the villages had been granted only for life or were inheritable by the descendants of the grantee, and whether the talukhdar, or the holder of the grant for the time being, was liable for the revenue on the villages. The same questions were now raised by the third generation, who were the great-grandsons of the grantor, on the construction of the award. There was no limitation in the original grant of the villages to the grantee personally, nor was the grant expressly declared to be to him and his lineal descendants through males. But possession had followed in that order, and the talukhdar had always paid the revenue. The award, not having been filed within six months after the passing of the Oudh Estates Act, 1869, did not come within s. 33 of that Act. Held (1) that the award was not on that account invalid. It was obligatory upon both parties to the submission and upon those whose interests they represented. (2) That evidence of the antecedent possession of the villages, as well as of the quasi-judicial acts of the arbitrators, was admissible. (3) That the terms of the award conferred upon the grantee and his descendants the right to possess the villages free of rent to the talukhdar, who remained responsible for the revenue. (4) That the villages would not revert to the talukhdar's line until the line of the grantee's descendants should have become extinct. BHAIYA ARDAWAN SINGH v. UDEY PRATAB SINGH [I. L. An arbitration award, dated 1838, which was assented to by the ancestors of the parties, provided that the defendant's father should continue to hold the deshpande vatan, and pay a certain allowance to the plaintiff's father and two uncles, unless they should see fit to make a partition. The plaintiff alleged that the allowance as fixed was payable in perpetuity, and was paid till 1864-65, when it was stopped, and prayed for a decree declaring him entitled to it and arrears for eleven years. Held that effect could not be given to the award as a decree, as no Court would pass a decree fixing a grant of maintenance in perpetuity; that an allowance fixed by a decree as maintenance was ordinarily liable to be varied, on the party ordered to pay it showing circumstances rendering it equitable to make the variation; and that, there being no reason to suppose that the arbitrators had any idea of fixing the allowance for a longer period than the lifetime of the parties, and all those parties being dead, no effect could any longer be given to the award. The plaintiff preferred objections to the award in so far as it directed payment by instalments, and the Court, holding that the arbitrators had no power to make such a direction, modified the award to that extent, under s. 518 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the District Judge, while allowing the power of the arbitrators to direct payment by instalments, reduced the number of instalments which had been fixed. Held that, as it was clear that the reference to arbitration gave the arbitrators full powers, not only as to the amount to be paid, but also as to the manner of payment, the lower Appellate Court was wrong in reducing the number of instalments which had been fixed. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The word "award" used in the last sentence of s. 522 of the Code must be understood to mean an award as given by the arbitrators, and not as amended by the Court under s. 518. 127. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 521, cl. (a)—"Misconduct" of arbitrator.—The word "misconduct," as used in s. 521, cl. (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, should be interpreted in the sense in which it is used in English law with reference to arbitration proceedings. It does not necessarily imply moral turpitude, but it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators, and of what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards. An arbitrator to whom the matters in difference in a suit were referred under s. 508 of the Civil Procedure Code, and who was directed by the order of reference to deliver his award by the 22nd September, applied on the 17th September for an extension of time on the ground that a very full investigation was necessary, which it was not possible to make within the prescribed period. On the 20th September, without waiting for the order of the Court, he notified to the parties that he proposed to hold an inquiry in the case on the 24th, and it appeared that he did not expect this intimation to reach them before the 21st or 22nd. On the 23rd he informed the plaintiff's pleader that a new date would be fixed for the inquiry, of which notice would be given to the parties. Notwithstanding this, on the 23rd the arbitrator took evidence for the defendant in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. All these proceedings were held before the arbitrator received an order of the Court extending the time for delivery of the award up to the 26th October. On the 27th September he directed the parties to be informed that the investigation would be held on the 5th October. On the 4th October the plaintiff presented a petition praying the arbitrator to summon witnesses and to take documentary evidence, and upon this nothing definite was settled at the time; but after the pleaders had left, the arbitrator passed an order rejecting the petition, on the ground that the evidence sought to be produced was unnecessary. On the same date and on the 5th and 6th October he took evidence for the defence in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. On the 10th he rejected a petition by the plaintiff praying for further time to produce evidence, and complaining of his having taken evidence in the plaintiff's absence and having received in evidence a fabricated document. On the 25th October the arbitrator delivered his award in favour of the defendant. Subsequently, upon objections made by the plaintiff, the Court set aside the award, and directed that the trial of the suit should proceed:—Held that, although no case of "corruption" within the meaning of s. 521, cl. (a), of the Civil Procedure Code had been made out against the arbitrator, the circumstances above stated amounted to "misconduct," and the award was, therefore, bad in law, and had rightly been set aside. Soobal Thakur Opadeeah v. *Punchanund Tikka, S. 131. ——— In another case heard at the same time and between the same parties, the facts were these:—The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on the 9th January without any notice to the defendants. It was alleged that nothing was done at this meeting. On that day the arbitrators sent a notice to the appellants appointing the next day (10th) at 6-30 P.M. for the next meeting. The defendants' attorney thereupon wrote protesting, and asked the arbitrators not to proceed, as they intended to apply to the Court. No notice of this protest was taken by the arbitrators, and they proceeded with the arbitration on the 10th in the absence of the defendants. On the 11th the defendants' attorney received a notice that the arbitrators would hold a meeting on the 12th at 8 A.M. A meeting was held on that day in the absence of the defendants, and an award was made decreeing the suit. Held that the arbitrators did not give the defendants a fair and reasonable opportunity of being heard, and were guilty of such misconduct as was sufficient to vitiate the award. Semble—The ex-parte meeting on the 10th was alone sufficient to warrant the Court in setting aside the award. 132. ——— Ground for setting aside award—Arbitrator receiving evidence from one side in absence of other side—Misconduct—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 521.—An arbitrator ought not to hear or receive evidence from one side in the absence of the other side, without (if he does) giving the other side affected by such evidence the opportunity of meeting and answering it. This proposition is, however, subject to the qualification that the parties may agree that a reference may be conducted in any particular way, and such an agreement may be either express or implied from their conduct during the arbitration, and they may also expressly or by their conduct waive their objection to an irregular course of conduct on the part of the arbitrator. Where an arbitrator received certain papers and documents from the defendants in a suit referred to his arbitration, together with a letter from the defendants containing certain documents sent to him and made his award without giving the plaintiffs an opportunity of seeing the said papers and documents, and of meeting the inferences deducible from them :—Held that there was such a breach of duty on the part of the arbitrator as entitled the plaintiffs to have the award set aside. 133. ——— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 508, 514, 521—Omission to fix time for delivery of award—Extension of time after expiration of period fixed—Invalidity of award when not made within time fixed by Court—Costs.—The provision contained in s. 508 of the Civil Procedure Code, requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the delivery of the award, is not imperative, but directory, and non-compliance with it does not make the order of reference abortive and any subsequent arbitration proceedings ineffectual and bad. Under s. 514 of the Code, the Court may extend the time for making the award after the time fixed therefor has expired. The last paragraph of s. 521 does not imply that an omission by the Court to fix a positive date within which the award is to be filed is fatal to the validity of the award. Where an order extending the time for delivery of an award was made after the time fixed therefor had expired, and did not fix any positive date for the filing of the award :—Held that the adoption of the award by the Court amounted to an enlargement of the time for delivery of the award to the date on which it was in fact delivered, and to a ratification of what had been done by the arbitrators, and that the parties, having made no objection to the action of the Court, must be taken to have waived any objection to the award. The mere circumstance of an arbitrator having first tendered and then withdrawn his resignation does not formally divest him of his character as arbitrator. Joymungul Singh v. *Mohun Ram Marwaree, 23 W. Held on appeal to the Privy Council (reversing the above decision) :—When once an award has been delivered, it is no longer competent to the Court to grant further time, or to enlarge the period for the delivery of the award under s. 514 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Where an award was not made within the period fixed by the Court's order, but was made after the date given in the last order extending the time for its delivery,—Held that the award was invalid. The decree of the Court dealing with the award as if duly made within the time could not be treated as enlarging it. The judgment in Chuha Mal v. Hari Ram, I. L. R., 8 All., 548, approved. Pending that being done, the parties applied to the Appellate Court to refer the case to arbitration, and that Court referred that application to the original Court for disposal, although the case was still pending on its own file for disposal. Subsequently another application was made to the original Court to refer the case to arbitration, and on the 10th May the record was sent to the arbitrator with directions to submit his award within seven days. On the 12th September, as the award had not been sent in, the original Court passed an order recalling the record, and subsequently the award of the arbitrator, dated the 12th September, was filed. The original Court thereupon forwarded the record to the Appellate Court for its decision. Objections were taken to the award, but overruled, and the Appellate Court passed an order directing the case to be sent back to the original Court, with orders to pass a formal decree in accordance with the award of the arbitrator. Held that the award was bad in law, because the time within which it was directed to be made had never been enlarged, and the Court's order of the 12th September recalling the record could not be taken as an indication that the time was enlarged. An award which is invalid under s. 521 of the Civil Procedure Code, because not made within the period allowed by the Court, is not an award upon which the Court can make a decree, and a decree passed in accordance with such an award is not a decree in accordance with an award from which no appeal lies with reference to the ruling of the Full Bench in Luchman Das v. *Brijpal, I. It was held that, assuming that the reference permitted the arbitrators nominated to authorize either of the parties to collect the debts attached, inasmuch as the agreement was unaccompanied by any stipulation that a less number than the whole of the arbitrators could determine whether such permission should be given, the act of the three arbitrators which led to the issue of the order could not be supported, and that the last portion of that order was ultra vires, and must be declared void. After this reference, the parties agreed by an ikrarnama to submit the same suits, together with other matters, to the arbitration of five persons, the effect being to withdraw the first submission and substitute the new agreement. Before these arbitrators arrived at a final conclusion, the parties by a solenamah compromised the whole of the subjects of dispute, and afterwards an award was drawn up in the terms of the solenamah and signed by two of the arbitrators and the head arbitrator. When the award was brought before the Subordinate Judge, he considered it had been made ultra vires in respect of those matters which were not involved in the suits originally referred, and accordingly made a decree only in those suits corresponding with the terms of the award. Some of the defendants applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the effect of a decree given to that portion of the award which was left outstanding by the first decision. During the investigation of these matters by the arbitrators the plaintiff offered to be bound by the oath of the defendant administered on the Koran. The defendant agreed to take such oath, and such was accordingly administered to him by the arbitrators, and his evidence taken, and an award made based on the evidence so taken. On special appeal to the High Court by the plaintiff, he objected for the first time, the objection not having been taken in his memorandum of special appeal, that the arbitrators were not legally competent to administer such oath, and the evidence so taken could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was therefore void. Held per PEARSON, J., SPANKIE, J., dissenting, with reference to the legal competency of the arbitrators to administer the oath, that the objection was good, and that the arbitrators had no power to administer the oath. Per PEARSON, J., that the statement of the defendant made on an oath illegally administered could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was void and should be set aside. Per SPANKIE, J., that the plaintiff having offered to be bound by the oath, and the defendant having agreed to take it, the plaintiff was bound by the evidence given on such oath; and that, as the arbitrators had by law and consent of parties authority to receive the evidence of the defendant, the substitution by them of an oath on the Koran for an affirmation did not, under the provisions of s. 13, Act X of 1873, invalidate such evidence, and consequently render the award based on such evidence void. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence, and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. Held on appeal that, as the objection was well founded, inasmuch as the agreement to refer was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly lay down the power of the arbitrator in dealing with the subject-matter in dispute, and as it was not possible to make out what powers were intended to be conferred upon the arbitrator, the award should not be allowed to be enforced under the provisions of ss. 525 and 526. each sitting they came to a decision, either unanimously or by a majority, on different questions submitted to them. executors of the third to nominate an arbitrator under the terms of the deed, but they refused to do so. This application was opposed by the executors of the third partner, who appeared and lodged verified petitions disclosing grounds of objection within the meaning of s. 520 or s. 521 of the Code. Held that the word "parties," as used in s. 525, should not be confined to persons who are actually before the arbitrators; that if persons by an agreement have undertaken between themselves that, in the event of a certain state of things happening, a particular procedure shall be followed, which, under one state of circumstances, may be adopted in invitum, they should, for the purposes of s. 525, be regarded as parties to that arbitration; and that there was sufficient reason to show that the defendants in the present case were primâ facie bound by the arbitration, so as to bring them within the terms of s. 525 as parties thereto, who should be called on to show cause why the award should not be filed. Willcox v. *Storkey, L. It appeared that the defendant in the proceedings before the arbitrators, notwithstanding the knowledge that this document was withheld, submitted nevertheless to take his chances of the arbitration; suggesting in fact favourable presumptions to himself in construing the will produced, or that the whole will not having been produced, it should be declared not to be operative, and that consequently the dispute should be determined according to the British law of succession as laid down by Act I of 1869, or according to custom, or according to the Mahomedan law of succession. Held that the award could not be set aside on the ground of the objection taken. According to the true construction thereof, the earlier sections are not incorporated into s. 327 of Act VIII of 1859, as they are into s. 326. The words "sufficient cause" in s. 327 should be taken to comprehend any substantial objection which appears on the face of the award, or is founded on the misconduct of the arbitrators, or on any miscarriage in the course of the proceedings, or upon any other ground which would be considered fatal to an award on an application to the Courts

The law does not require a licensee always to have his licence with him. If under such circumstances, on being required to produce it, he is prepared to do so on a reasonable opportunity being given him to get it, and it exists, he should not be prosecuted; if prosecuted, the production of the licence at the trial is a sufficient answer to the charge of infringing the Arms Act. Held, further, that a licence granted to a person to carry arms and including a retainer authorizes any retainer to carry the arms specified with the permission of his master, and does not restrict him merely to carry them while in the actual presence of his master. He was suspected of being in possession of arms after the cancellation of his licence. On the 23rd of April 1899, the Assistant Magistrate of Purneah, with a number of police, went to the house of the accused to search for arms. They surrounded it, arrested the accused, and then searched his house. The police had no search-warrants, nor was there anything to show upon what charge the accused was arrested. Two gun stocks, some ammunition, and implements for reloading were discovered in the house. There was nothing to show that the sanction required by s. 29 of the Arms Act was given before proceedings were instituted against the accused. Accused was convicted and sentenced under ss. 19 and 20 of the Arms Act. Held that the conviction under s. 20 was not sustainable, but that the accused must be taken to have had arms and ammunition as defined by the Arms Act within the meaning of sub-s. (f) of s. 19 of that Act, and the conviction under that section must be confirmed. Held, further, that with respect to the question of whether or not any previous sanction had been given under s. 29 of the Arms Act, the Court was not unmindful of the suggestion that the charge in this case was, in the first instance, in respect of an alleged offence under s. 20 and not of one under s. 19; but that ss. 19 and 20 were so interwoven that it was difficult to see how an offence could be committed under the first paragraph of s. 20 unless an offence under one of the enumerated sub-sections in s. 19 had also been committed. temple neglected to take out a licence in respect of these arms under Act XI of 1878. A Police Inspector, who was appointed to see that the provisions of the latter Act were obeyed, searched the temple on information received, and, having found the arms, prosecuted the persons who had charge of the temple. The latter was convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of Patna under s. 19, cl. (f), of Act XI of 1878, and sentenced to pay a fine of ₹50, or to be rigorously imprisoned for two months. The Deputy Magistrate also ordered the arms to be confiscated, and directed that their value and the fine should be divided between the informer and the Police Inspector. On a reference from the Sessions Judge of Patna,—Held with reference to Act X of 1872, s. 579, and the last heading to sch. IV of the same Act, and to s. 19, cl. (f), of Act XI of 1878, that the proceedings of the Police Inspector and the conviction of the accused were not illegal. There is nothing in the Arms Act to exempt the custodians of a temple from complying with the requirements of the Arms Act, either by taking out a licence or obtaining exemption under s. 27. S. 25 of the Arms Act appears to refer to cases in which the Magistrate considers that arms, whether under a licence or not, are possessed for an illegal purpose, or under circumstances such as to endanger the public peace. S. 30 of the Arms Act appears to contemplate the presence of some specially empowered officer besides the officer conducting the search. EMPRESS v. TEGHA SINGH [I. L. R., 8 Calc., 473

1. ———— Arrest pending enquiry into insolvency—Application of judgment-debtor to be declared insolvent—Subsequent proceedings in execution against him—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 245B, 336, 337A, 344, and 349.—G obtained a money-decree against M, and in execution applied for his arrest and imprisonment. Before the warrant of arrest was issued, but after M had appeared in Court in obedience to a notice under s. 245B of the Civil Procedure Code, another judgment-creditor applied for execution of another decree against him. Thereupon M applied, under s. 344 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to be declared an insolvent, and in his application mentioned G as one of his creditors (s. 345). The Subordinate Judge referred to the High Court the question whether, pending the inquiry into M's insolvency, he could be arrested in execution of G's decree against him. Held that there was no provision in the Code to prevent the Court from issuing a warrant of arrest against him. Where, however, such a judgment-debtor is brought before the Court under a warrant of arrest, or comes before it upon notice under s. 245B, the Court has a discretionary power not to put the warrant in force under s. 349 or not to issue it under s. 336 (where the requisite notification has been published by the Local Government) if the applicant furnishes security for his appearance when called upon. On 14th May 1898 a notice was issued to the judgment-debtor to show cause why this decree should not be executed by his arrest and imprisonment: he pleaded poverty and "other sufficient cause," and the matter was set down for inquiry under s. 337A. When it came on, the Court, after hearing the evidence of the judgment-debtor, held that no cause had been shown why he should not be arrested, and that it was bound to order his arrest at once under that section, and subsistence allowance was ordered under s. 339. ASSAM LAND AND REVENUE REGULATION (I of 1886).

——— ss. 2, prov. (b), 12, and ss. 39, 151, and 154—Settlement-holder, his rights under a settlement—Nisf-kherajdar, his rights to a settlement.—The effect of ss. 39 and 151 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, 1886, is that a settlement made by a Settlement Officer, unless interfered with by the Chief Commissioner, is final; but the settlement-holder does not thereby acquire any right to the land so settled as against any person claiming rights to it. The effect of an order by the Government of India before the passing of the Assam Regulation in regard to the right of a nisf-kherajdar to hold lands found upon survey to be in excess of his nisf-kheraj estate, and to obtain a settlement thereof, considered. In 1881 S, a nisf-kherajdar, obtained a settlement for a year of certain lands which were found upon survey to be in excess of his nisf-kheraj estate. Subsequently a pottah was granted to S for a portion of the excess lands, while the other portion was settled by the revenue authorities under a kobala pottah with M, who entered into possession under his settlement. In a suit by S, the nisf-kherajdar, for a declaration of his right to a settlement of the portion settled with M and for possession,—Held that, having regard to the provisions of s. 2, prov. (b), s. 12 of the Regulation, and the order of the Government of India, the nisf-kherajdar was entitled to a declaration of his right to a settlement, but in view of s. 154 he was not entitled to a decree for possession. to which reference is made in s. 70 includes both an estate as well as a share in respect of which revenue has been separately apportioned. The object of s. 37, Act XI of 1859, is the same as that of s. 71, Regulation I of 1886. Those sections cannot be said to have different meanings, for, if it were to be held that the incumbrance which could be set aside under s. 71 of the Regulation I of 1886 must be an incumbrance actively created by the previous holder, it would amount to this, that any acquiescence or laches, either wilful or arising from pure negligence on the part of the holder, by which the talukh or estate becomes incapable in the hands of the purchaser of yielding the Government revenue, would be outside the scope of this section. Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 268, 272, 284, 285.—The accused was committed for trial to the Sessions Court on a charge of murder. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, and claimed to be tried. 16. ——— Assessors prevented by death or illness from attending a trial—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 268, 285.—During the course of a trial before a Sessions Court with three assessors, one assessor died at an early stage of the proceedings. Later on another assessor became too ill to take any further part in the trial, and the third assessor was obliged to retire at the beginning of the accused's pleader's address to the Court, and did not return until it was finished. Held that the law contemplated the continuous attendance of at least one assessor throughout the trial. This condition not having been fulfilled, the proceedings before the Sessions Court must be set aside as having (with regard to the provisions of s. 268 of the Code of Criminal Procedure) been held before a Court not having jurisdiction. 17. ——— Effect of incapacity of assessors to understand the proceedings—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), s. 285.—Three assessors were chosen to assist the Court at a trial. Before the case commenced, it was discovered that one of the assessors was deaf, and his presence was accordingly dispensed with. The trial proceeded with two assessors present; but after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case, it was discovered that one of the remaining assessors was so deaf as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings. Under these circumstances, it was held that the trial having been held with practically only one assessor, the proceedings ought to be set aside and a new trial ordered. (g)—Payments due under the Oudh loans of 1838 and 1842—Exemption from liability to attachment for debt.*—Although it is probable that the enactments of s. 266, Civil Procedure Code, 1882, were not meant to cover pensions payable by a foreign State when remitted for payment to their pensioners in India, they certainly include all pensions of a political nature payable directly by the Government of India. A pension guaranteed payable by the latter by a treaty obligation contracted with another sovereign power is in the strictest sense a political pension. An allowance, payable by the Government of India under an arrangement made between the King of Oudh and the Governor-General in 1842 for the benefit of members of the King's family and household, and their respective heirs in perpetuity, and payable to one of such heirs, who has inherited it, as his share in the interest in the Oudh loan of 1842, is a political pension within the meaning of s. 266, sub-s. (g), Civil Procedure Code, 1882. The arrangement of 1842 cannot be treated as merely a provision out of the King's private estate for the maintenance of members of his family, there having been in a State like that of Oudh no distinction between State property and private property vested in the sovereign. The lower Court held that, as the interest taken by the defendant in the house under her husband's will was only a widow's estate, V, as her husband's son, had an interest in the house which might be attached by the plaintiffs. Held (reversing the decree) that V had no interest in the house. The entire estate was vested by the testator in the defendant. No doubt, her estate was a widow's estate. Her estate in it closely resembled that of a married woman in England, to whom property is given with a restraint against alienation. That being so, she was unable to dispose of it, but still she was its full owner. The whole property passed to her from the testator. Nothing was left in him. By his first wife he had a son U. J's second wife was G, by whom he had a son, whose widow was K, the defendant in the suit. J died, leaving U his son, G his widow, and K his son's widow, and on his death U inherited the village. Prior to the year 1874 U had made a gift to G of 105 bighas situate in the village. In 1874 the rights and interests of U in the village were sold by auction and purchased by T, the ancestor of the plaintiffs. G, by a deed of gift, conveyed the 105 bighas to K, and ultimately died on 26th January 1883. Plaintiffs then sued to set aside the gift and for possession of the land. The learned Judge found that the land was given to G in lieu of her maintenance, which she was to hold rent-free for her life, and that she had been in possession thereof for twenty years. Further, that U had the right to resume the land and assess it to rent on the death of G, and that all the rights and interests of U in the land were attached and sold in 1874. On second appeal it was contended that the interest of U in the land at the time of the sale of the village by auction was in the nature of a mere expectancy, and therefore could not be sold and was not sold. Held that U gave to G the usufruct of the land for her life in lieu of her maintenance; that after the gift the interest of U in the land was of the same character and carried with it the same consequences as the reversion which the lessor would have for land leased for life or years, and analogous to the right which a mortgagor who had granted a usufructuary mortgage would have; that U had a vested right in the land which was capable of being sold, and that right passed to the auction-purchaser at the sale of 1874. Koraj Koonwar v. *Komul Koonwar, 6 W. By his will he bequeathed the residue of his property to trustees (of whom his widow was one) in trust to pay the rents and income thereof to his widow for life, "she thereout maintaining, educating, and bringing up" his children in a manner suitable to their degree in life. After his death the property, moveable and immoveable, was to be divided among his sons equally when D should attain the age of twenty-five. He attained majority in October 1895. At the date of suit, D was eighteen years old and P was twenty-five. It was contended that the widow was only a trustee of the rents for the benefit of her sons P and D. On the 13th June 1895, the plaintiffs obtained a decree for R3,976-10-10 against the widow and her son P. In execution of that decree, they attached, under an order dated 2nd July 1895, the immoveable properties which had belonged to the testator's estate on the ground that both the widow and P had an interest in them. The attachment was issued under s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The defendants contended that the widow had no attachable interest at all in the said properties, she being under the will merely a trustee as above mentioned for her sons, and that, if she had, it was an interest in moveable property, which should have been attached under s. 268 of the Code, and that the attachment under s. 274 was ineffectual and inoperative. They further alleged that by an assignment dated the 20th February 1896 she had assigned and surrendered her life interest to her son D, and that such interest was, therefore, not available to satisfy the plaintiff's decree against her. As to P's interest, the defendants alleged that by a deed of settlement, dated the 9th February 1895, it was validly settled for the benefit of himself and his family, and that, therefore, he had no interest in him which could be attached under the order of the 2nd July 1895. Held (1) that the widow had an attachable interest in the property. (2) That her interest was an interest in immoveable property, and was validly attached under s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code. (3) That her assignment of the 20th February 1896 was invalid as against the plaintiffs under s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code. NATHA KERRA v. DHUNBAIJI [I. L. R., 23 Bom., 1

By law and usage, a certain relationship grows up between certain pilgrims or worshippers and a particular priest, and when such relationship exists, such pilgrims or worshippers are called yajmans, or clients of the priest, whose right to offer and perform the religious ceremonies in question for such yajmans becomes exclusive against rival priests, so far that, under the Hindu law as applied and followed in this Presidency, if any such yajmans accept the religious services of another priest, they must compensate the priest, whose yajmans they are, by giving to him a reasonable fee." Held that such a vritti is a "right of personal service" within the meaning of cl. Where property ordered to be attached is deposited in the Court which made the order for attachment, that order is sufficient notice to itself that the property ordered to be attached is to be held subject to the further orders of the Court, and it is not necessary that a separate formal notice should be drawn up. One M was the manager at Dhulia, and he had authority to borrow money and draw hundis on behalf of the company. In August 1894, the directors opened negotiations for the sale of the company's factory to one H, and in September 1894, while the negotiations were pending, a special resolution was passed to wind up the company voluntarily. The resolution was confirmed in October 1894, and A was appointed liquidator under s. 177 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). In December 1894, the liquidator agreed to sell the factory to H for the said sum of ₹38,000. Under the agreement, H was to enter into possession of the factory, but the company was to have a lien upon it until the completion of the purchase, which was to take place in May 1895. A month before the date fixed for the completion of the sale, the plaintiff filed a suit in the Court of the first class Subordinate Judge of Dhulia against M, the manager of the company, in his individual capacity and as manager of the company. His claim was professedly against the company, but he did not make the company, which was then in liquidation, a party to the suit. Subsequently the plaintiff applied for and obtained an order for attachment before judgment of the company's factory at Dhulia. No notice of the application or of the order made on it was given to the liquidator. He at once applied to the Court to raise the attachment, contending that the Court had no power to attach the property of the company, which was not a party to the suit. The Court made the company a party, and dismissed the liquidator's application, confirming its previous order for attachment. The liquidator appealed to the High Court. Held that the order of attachment should be reversed. The intended sale by the liquidator, which was the sole reason for making the order, was not with intent to obstruct any decree that the plaintiff might obtain against the company, but was being effected by the liquidator in the course of his duty and in pursuance of a contract entered into long before the suit was instituted. The plaintiff's claim, if established, would be satisfied pari passu with the other debts of the company. The plaintiff was not entitled to security for his claim in preference to the other creditors. It was contended that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge, and that the liquidator's sole remedy was by suit under ss. 283 and 487 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that, the company having been made a party to the suit, the order of attachment was made under s. 485 of the Civil Procedure Code, and consequently under s. 588 an appeal lay from that order. If the company had not been made a party, the High Court would have set aside the order of attachment under s. 622 of the Code, as in that case the Subordinate Judge would have had no jurisdiction to make it. 134. ——— Attachment, Effect of—Necessity of subsequent attachment—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 89.—R R filed a plaint against I R on the 15th, and obtained a decree on the 27th of February, and a prohibitory order was made against I R's property on the 18th of March, subject to three prior attachments: one by J S, whose plaint was filed on the 30th of January, and who obtained a prohibitory order on the 13th and a decree on the 16th of February; a second by N S, who filed his plaint and obtained a prohibitory order on the 30th of January, and obtained a decree on February 22nd; and a third by K S, who also filed his plaint and got a prohibitory order on January 30th, and a decree on February 28th for an order for the sale of the goods on notice to the other three plaintiffs; and the Court ruled that N S and K S were entitled to priority over R R. Held that the process in attachment before judgment is in all respects the same as in cases of attachment after judgment, and the effect in binding the property attached, so as to prevent alienation, is the same. That an attachment, whether before or after judgment, places the property in the custody of the law. That if property have been attached before judgment, there is no need of a second attachment in the same suit after judgment. That the words "attachment before judgment" in s. 89 of Act VIII of 1859 must be read as equivalent to "attachments in pending suits," or, in other words, the phrase "before judgment" must be read as meaning "until after judgment." The master being about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court with his vessel, the plaintiffs, under s. 477 of the Code of Civil Procedure, applied for an order that the defendant should give security for his appearance to answer any decree that might be passed against him, and a rule was issued calling on him to show cause why such security should not be furnished. The defendant showed cause, and alleged that the amount claimed for the repairs was excessive, that the repairs were badly done, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to dock-hire, and that some of the repairs charged for had not been executed. He further counter-claimed for a large sum for demurrage owing to the detention of his vessel and damages caused to it by the wrongful act of the plaintiffs. It was contended that, as the claim was on a contested account which on the face of it was stated, but unsettled, on the principle of the English authorities, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the order asked for. It was further contended that the suit was not a bonâ fide one, but brought merely to harass the defendant, and that for this reason security should not be ordered to be given. It was not disputed that the defendant had no domicile in this country, and that he was shortly leaving in his vessel in the ordinary course of his business. The Court found the plaintiffs were undoubtedly entitled to recover some amount on account of repairs, and that the mere fact that the plaintiffs added on to such a claim one of a disputable character did not go to show that the suit was not a bonâ fide one. Held that there is no authority for saying that the principles applied in England to the granting of writs ne exeat regno should be applied in this country; that the Court can only look to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure; that when a person comes on business to this country, in which he has no property or domicile, and enters into a contract with a person to do work in connection with that business, and which must be done before he leaves the country, and it is known he intends to leave as soon as the work is completed, there is an implied understanding, if the work was done on his credit, that it should be paid for before he leaves. Held, also, that the case fell within the provisions of s. 477 of the Code, and that the defendant should furnish security for his appearance while the suit was pending within a week in terms of s. 479, such security to be for the amount of the claim. On the 6th March following a decree in the suit was passed against him. On the 28th July, the defendant being then still in jail under the order of the 5th February, the plaintiff took out a fresh warrant of arrest in execution of the decree, and sought to have the defendant further imprisoned for the full period of six months limited by s. 342 of the Code. Held that the defendant could be re-committed to jail, in execution of the decree, only for such a period as, together with the period of imprisonment that had elapsed since the passing of the decree, would complete a period of six months, and that consequently he would be entitled to be liberated on the 5th September 1883. Meanwhile, in December 1885, a decree for pre-emption in respect of a sale by the judgment-debtors in 1881 of their muafi interests in the village was decreed in favour of persons who were not parties to the litigation in which the attachment of 1884 was effected. The plaintiffs (who were in possession) sued for a declaration of their right to the muafi interests as against the auction-purchaser under the sale of January 1886. Held that the attachment in 1884 was not a good attachment of the muafi interests of the judgment-debtors, and the auction-purchaser could not be held to have purchased those muafi interests, and the title of the plaintiffs under their pre-emptive decree of December 1885 must prevail. 205. ——— Attachment before judgment—Termination of attachment—Sale in execution—Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale without attachment—Waiver—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 311, 493.—The plaintiff instituted a suit against the defendant for recovery of money, and previous to judgment, that is, on the 8th January 1885, applied for, and on the 11th obtained, orders for attachment of several houses and premises belonging to defendant, and such attachment was made. The suit was dismissed, but eventually on appeal it was decreed, but the attachment was never withdrawn. Plaintiff then applied for execution of his decree, and his application was granted by an order directing that the property of the judgment-debtor should be notified for sale on the 1st February 1887, and accordingly, on the 21st December 1880, a sale notification was issued. Judgment-debtor twice applied for postponement of sale, but his applications were refused, and the sale took place on the date fixed. The judgment-debtor then objected to the confirmation of the sale, urging that the property sold was never attached in execution of the decree, and the attachment previous to judgment was infructuous, because afterwards the claim was dismissed by the Court of first instance; that there had been several other irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale; and that, owing to the irregularities, property had been sold at a grossly inadequate price, causing substantial injury. The Subordinate Judge, overruling the objections, confirmed the sale. On appeal by the judgment-debtor,—Held, following Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit, I. L. R., 5 All., 86, that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of decrees for money; and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable, but de facto void, and may be set aside without any inquiry as to substantial injury being sustained by the judgment-debtor for want of a valid attachment; and that an attachment before judgment, like a temporary injunction, becomes functus officio as soon as the suit terminates. Further, that the phrase "a material irregularity in publishing or conducting" in the first paragraph of s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be liberally construed, and that absence of attachment of property at the time of sale thereof is "a material irregularity," attachment being the first step which a Court in executing a simple money-decree has to take to assert its authority to bring property to compulsory sale. 211. ——— Question of priority of attachment—Attachment under decree of High Court of property already attached under decree of Small Cause Court—Claim to attached property, by what Court to be decided—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 272.—In execution of a decree obtained in the High Court, the plaintiffs, on the 22nd of March 1895, attached certain property of the defendant, which, however, had been already attached on the 22nd of February 1895 by one R, who had obtained a decree against defendant in the Court of Small Causes. The plaintiffs' attachment was therefore effected under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by a notice addressed by the Prothonotary of the High Court to the Registrar of the Small Cause Court. The claimant was mortgagee in possession, and the defendants were his tenants. On the 26th February he had lodged a claim in the Small Cause Court to the said property as mortgagee in possession, and on the 25th March 1895 a consent order was passed by the Chief Judge of that Court directing that R's attachment should stand subject to the claimant's claim. On the 22nd April 1895, the claimant applied to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court to issue a notice to the plaintiffs in this suit, under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, to determine the question of priority of claim to the attached property between him and the plaintiffs. His application was refused, the Chief Judge being of opinion that he could not interfere in a High Court suit. The claimant then filed his claim in the High Court, and took out this summons to remove the plaintiffs' attachment. Held that, under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Small Cause Court was the only Court to decide the question of priority between the claimant and the plaintiffs. 217. ——— Effect of removal of attachment—Execution struck off from laches of decree-holder.—Certain property was attached in execution of a decree, and while the attachment was in force, pottahs were granted to certain persons by the judgment-debtors. Twelve years after the attachment, no further steps having been taken in the matter, the execution case was struck off the file, and the property was afterwards mortgaged by the judgment-debtors to R. Subsequently, a fresh attachment was issued at the instance of the heirs of the former attaching creditor, under which the property was put up for sale subject to R's mortgage, and R herself became the purchaser. In a suit by R to set aside the pottahs granted during the continuance of the first attachment,—Held that the prohibition against alienation of property under attachment avoids such alienation only as against the execution-creditor or persons entitled to claim under him. A conveyance executed by the judgment-debtor after an attachment has been removed, and before a fresh attachment is issued, is valid, though the second attachment is under the same execution as the first. Quære—Whether an alienation of property under attachment void as against the execution-creditor becomes valid by relation when the attachment is removed. Semble—It may be presumed that an execution long neglected, and finally struck off, has ceased to be operative, and in that case a judgment-creditor's title will only date from any subsequent attachment which he may obtain. Nevertheless the decree-holder proceeded to execute a decree of the judgment-debtor attached by him and brought to sale certain property which was in question in the present suit, and it was purchased bonâ fide by the present defendant, who obtained a sale certificate from the Court. The present plaintiff claimed as assignee from the holder of the attached decree to execute it against the same land, and now sued for a declaration that it was liable to be brought to sale by him, and that the defendant's purchase was void as against him. Held (1) that under the circumstances of the case the attachment in execution of the decree of 1885 was subsisting at the time of the purchase by the defendant; (2) that a judgment-creditor who attaches a decree is competent to execute it. The attaching creditor thereupon sued for and obtained, under s. 283 of the Code, a declaration that the mortgaged property was nevertheless liable to be sold under this attachment. A few days after obtaining such decree, he again attached the judgment-debtor's property. The mortgagees then sued on their mortgage, and obtained a decree for sale. The sale in execution of the attaching creditor's decree and that ordered by the decree in favour of the mortgagees were both advertised for the same day. The plaintiff purchased at the sale under the attaching creditor's decree, and then sued for a declaration that the property was not liable to be sold in execution of the mortgage-decree on the ground that the judgment-creditor's attachment was restored by the decree under s. 283 of the Code, and that the mortgage executed by the judgment-debtors was invalid as against the plaintiff, the purchaser at the execution sale. Held (affirming the decisions of the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge) that the plaintiff was entitled to the decree sought. Mahommed Waris v. *Pitambur Sein, 21 W. In a suit by C to recover possession,—Held the Court had no power to make the order continuing the attachment, the right of attachment being only for sums actually due, and the whole amount for which execution issued being satisfied out of the proceeds, the alienation of the property to C was not void as against A. The property was, however, advertised for sale, and B obtained an order staying the sale, on a petition alleging that A had agreed to give him time on condition that the attachment should remain good, and declaring that he (B) would not alienate the property until the whole of the decree was satisfied. Subsequently B mortgaged a portion of this property to C. A assigned his decree to D, upon whose application the property was attached and sold, and E became the purchaser. C having taken steps to foreclose the mortgage, E, to prevent such foreclosure, paid the amount into Court. Held that E could not maintain a suit against C to recover the amount so paid by him. On or before the date of the said kanom, plaintiff's father had placed under attachment the properties covered by the kanom deed in execution of one of the said decrees; but the claim having been satisfied, no Court-sale followed. While the said attachment was still subsisting, and at a date later than that of the kanom, first defendant and other judgment-creditors applied for and obtained orders for the attachment of the same properties. On plaintiff's suing to establish the validity of his kanom, it was contended that in consequence of the said attachment first defendant would be entitled to rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that this was a claim enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of s. 276. Held that the kanom was valid. The attachment subject to which the kanom had been granted ceased to be operative both as regards the attaching creditor and the other judgment-creditors when the judgment-debt was discharged, and there could be no sale by the Court and no right on the part of the other creditors, in the circumstances, to apply for such a sale. The numbers and areas given in such application as the numbers and areas of the lands comprised in such holding were the numbers and areas of certain revenue-paying lands, and were not the numbers and areas of any lands held as muafi by the judgment-debtor. The order of attachment described the property as described in the application for attachment. The judgment-debtor having alienated by sale a muafi holding belonging to him, the decree-holders sued to have such alienation set aside as void under the provisions of s. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held that, having regard to the description given in the application for attachment and the order of attachment, it could not be said that the muafi holding alienated by the judgment-debtor was under attachment at the time of the alienation, and its alienation was therefore not void under s. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held also that the material misdescription of the property in this case in the order of attachment protected the alienees, who are bond fide purchasers, from having the alienation set aside as void under s. 276, as the attachment could not under the circumstances be held to have been "duly intimated and made known" as required by that section. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment-debtor was a bonâ fide transaction, entered into for valuable consideration. Held that, inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree-holders in manner provided by s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by s. 276 against private alienations of property under attachment; that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made; that the sale by the judgment-debtor was valid; and that execution of in the market, between attachment and sale, are the natural and necessary consequences of the creditor's unlawful act. The plaintiff, having taken, without success, the summary proceeding under s. 278, to get the release of goods attached under s. 487, in a suit to which he was not a party, afterwards, in a suit brought by him in accordance with s. 283, established his right of property in the goods. Held that (a) in order to entitle him to the full indemnity for the wrongful attachment he was not bound to allege and prove that the defendants had resisted his previous application under s. 278 maliciously, or without probable cause; and that (b) the goods having been sold under the Court's order, the difference in market-value of the goods at the time of their attachment (November 1883) and their price when they were sold (June 1884), the selling prices having fallen intermediately, must be added to the damages. Held also that, without bringing under review the judgment under s. 278, the effect of the judgment in the suit brought in accordance with s. 283 was to supersede the order under s. 278, and to render it inconclusive. The procedure on attachment not being the same in India as in England, where a judgment-creditor is not responsible for the consequence of a sale, under a judicial order, of goods taken in execution in satisfaction of his debt, that proposition does not hold good under the Indian procedure; and Walker v. *Olding, 1 H. & C., 621: 9 Jur., N. 9. STRIKING OFF EXECUTION PROCEEDINGS, EFFECT OF, ON ATTACHMENT.

255. ——— Effect of striking off execution proceedings, how it affects attachment.—The striking an execution proceeding off the file is an act which may admit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done, and no general rule can be laid down which would govern all cases of that kind; but having regard to the circumstances of the present case, viz., that the Court below had no opportunity of considering the circumstances under which the several execution proceedings were dismissed, it could not be held that there was no subsisting attachment, and that the order of the Court was bad in law. 258. ——— Extinguishment of attachment—Act VIII of 1859, s. 270—Execution of decree—Striking off execution case—Money-decree.—A obtained a decree against C for possession and mesne profits, but no specific amount of mesne profits was then assessed. In 1864 A, in execution of his decree, attached land belonging to C, but the execution case was struck off the file in 1865. After several ineffectual proceedings, A re-attached the property in March 1869. In execution of a decree against C, B had in February 1869 attached the same property. The property was sold under A's attachment in May 1869, and on the application of A, the Subordinate Judge, on the strength of A's attachment in 1864, gave priority to A's claim over that of B. The balance of the sale-proceeds, after satisfaction of A's decree, was only sufficient to cover a small portion of the decree obtained by B. In a suit by B against A, under s. 270, Act VIII of 1859, to recover the amount of her claim which remained unsatisfied,—Held that the attachment of A in 1864, on the strength of which A's claim was considered by the Subordinate Judge to have priority over that of B, was not a sufficient and valid attachment under s. 270. The attachment contemplated by that section means an attachment after a final money-decree. Held, also, that the striking off of the execution case of A in 1865 caused an extinguishment of the effect of the attachment of 1864. 275. ——— Stay of execution on security pending appeal—Alienation pending attachment—Striking off execution case on inability to give security.—While an appeal from a decree was pending before the Privy Council, the decree-holder (M) applied for execution, and attached the property of the judgment-debtor (B), who thereupon obtained an order of the High Court for stay of sale until security could be furnished. The decree-holder having failed to furnish adequate security, the execution case was struck off. The appeal to the Privy Council having been dismissed, the decree-holder revived execution proceedings, adding costs and interest to her original claim. Upon this a third party intervened, and objected to the attachment on the ground that he had obtained a mokurari pottah of the properties from B's representative. The objection having been allowed under Act VIII of 1859, s. 246, M brought a suit to have the mokurari declared to be invalid and fictitious. Held that plaintiff was not required to cause M's admitted proprietary right to be sold before she could maintain her suit. Held that the act of the Court in striking off the execution proceeding because of the inability of the decree-holder to furnish the required security was only for the convenience of business, and it left intact all the proceedings which had been taken up to that stage; nor did the decree-holder abandon the attachment, which was therefore subsisting when the mokurari pottah was granted. Accordingly the alienation of the property by the pottah was invalid and inoperative. SOONDUR SINGH v. BUHOORIA ALUM BASHEE [24 W. R., 36

Nothing was done by the decree-holder until the 30th November 1874, when a fresh application for attachment and sale was made. 2. ——— Mischief by fire—Possession of a fire-ball.—Held by GLOVER, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions, occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag, with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under s. 511 of the Penal Code, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by MITTER, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about with it cannot support a conviction under ss. 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards commission of the offence, but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it. 4. ——— Attempt to murder—Inconsistency between English Law and Penal Code.—In order to constitute the offence of attempt to murder, under s. 307 of the Penal Code, the act committed by the prisoner must be an act capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of events. Aliter under s. 511 taken in connection with ss. 299 and 300. Therefore where the prisoner presented an uncapped gun at F G (believing the gun to be capped) with the intention of murdering him, but was prevented from pulling the trigger,—Held that he could not be convicted of an attempt to murder upon a charge framed under s. 307 of the Penal Code, but that under the same circumstances he might be convicted upon a charge of simple attempt to murder framed under s. 511 in connection with ss. 299 and 300. 11. ——— Attempt to commit forgery—Penal Code, ss. 467, 511—Intention to commit offence.—To constitute the offence of attempt under s. 511, Penal Code, there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence, and for the purpose of committing that offence, and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence. The provisions of s. 511, Penal Code, do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. The petition writer commenced to write the bond, but, his suspicions being aroused, did not finish it, but took C and K S to the nearest thana. Held that, under the above circumstances, K S was rightly convicted of an attempt to commit the offence defined in s. 467 of the Penal Code, and C of abetment of the said attempt. Queen v. *Ram Sarun Chowbey, 4 N. 13. ——— Attempt to cheat—Penal Code, ss. 417, 511.—In a prosecution for an attempt to cheat, under ss. 417, 511 of the Penal Code, the accused was charged and convicted of having at the central octroi office made false representations as to the contents of certain kuppas (skin vessels), the object of which was to obtain a certificate entitling him to obtain a refund of octroi duty. Prior to granting the certificate, the octroi officers examined the contents of the kuppas, and found that the representations of the accused regarding them were untrue. In consequence of this discovery, no certificate was given to him, and he was charged and convicted as above mentioned. The procedure necessary for obtaining a refund of octroi duty was that the central office, on satisfying itself that the articles produced were of the nature stated, would grant a certificate, which certificate would have to be indorsed by the outpost clerk when he passed the goods (on which refund was claimed) out of the town, and the owner would have to take back the certificate so indorsed to the central office and present it to be cashed. Held that, even assuming the accused to have falsely represented the contents of the kuppas as alleged, he had not completed an attempt to cheat, but had only made preparation for cheating, and that the conviction must therefore be set aside. In September 1870 a further advance on the same terms was made and a further mortgage executed, which included the original sum, with the interest then due, and the further advance. Further advances were made in the same way in October 1871 and March 1876. In all these transactions the defendant had no independent professional advice, and the mortgages were prepared in the plaintiff's office, but not charged for. In a suit to recover the sum due on the mortgages by sale of the mortgaged property, the plaintiff abandoned any accumulation of interest since the date of the third mortgage. Held that the defendant, notwithstanding he had declined the offer of the plaintiff in 1869 to tax the bills, and notwithstanding the delay that had taken place, was entitled (having regard to the relation between the parties and to the fact that a portion of the costs was incurred in suits then pending) to have the bills taxed and to re-open the account. Under the circumstances, the Court would not infer acquiescence from the delay on the part of the defendant, nor did the plaintiff's offer to tax, and the defendant's refusal of that offer, debar the defendant of his right to have the bills taxed in the usual way. Held, also, that there is no rule which prevents an attorney from taking security or otherwise arranging with his client for the payment of costs which have actually become due, and that the plaintiff was entitled to sale of the property, to accumulations of interest prior to the date of the third mortgage calculated by allowing annual rests, to interest at 10 per cent. as being a fair rate for the client to have undertaken to pay when the mortgages were executed, and to interest on his costs. —The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant, but before satisfaction of the decree, the amount of the decree was attached in the hands of the defendant by a third person, who had obtained a decree in a suit against the plaintiff. On an application by the attorney for the plaintiff that the defendant might be ordered to pay to him his costs of suit out of the sum which had been attached in the defendant's hands, and on which the attorney claimed to have a lien, the Court held that the attorney had a lien for his costs on the sum so attached, but that the only order it could make was an order to the defendant not to pay the sum attached to any one without notice to the attorney. The title-deeds remained with M. Held that D was entitled to have re-delivery of the deeds to him from M, even independently of the express contract to return them. He did not give up possession of them to C by delivering them to M, though that was done at C's request. IN THE MATTER OF MACKERTICH . . . 15 B. L. R., Ap., 15

11. ——— Lien for costs—Lien on documents—Discharge by dissolution of partnership—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 1, 171.—Where a firm of attorneys dissolved partnership after the death of a client, there being at that time papers and documents belonging to the client in their hands, and a debt due in respect of costs from the client to them,—Held that the dissolution of partnership operated as a discharge by the firm, and that the attorneys were not entitled to retain the papers and documents until their costs were paid, but were bound to hand them over to the administrator of the client. S. 171 of the Contract Act does not give an attorney an absolute lien. S. 1 provides that nothing in the Act contained shall affect any usage or custom of trade, and, as no part of the English law is inconsistent with s. 171, cases arising in this country must be governed by the English authorities. According to those authorities, while the relation of attorney and client exists, the client may either continue to employ the attorney or change him. When he claims to do the latter, the attorney being willing to act, he cannot ask the attorney to give up papers in his possession without first satisfying the lien. The attorney has his option,—he may, if he chooses, either go on acting for his client, or cease to act; if he adopt the latter course, he must give up the papers. When the case was about to appear in the list for hearing, Messrs. P and W wrote to the plaintiff, requesting her to send them an advance of R1,000 to enable them to deliver briefs to counsel. They received no reply from the plaintiff, who afterwards obtained leave to sue as a pauper, and appeared by other solicitors. Messrs. P and W were subsequently served with a subpœna to produce, at the hearing, certain translations and other documents relating to the plaintiff's case which had remained in their possession, and upon which they claimed a lien in respect of costs due to them by the plaintiff. Held that Messrs. P and W could not be compelled to produce. A solicitor who is discharged by his client holds the papers entrusted to him subject to his lien for costs, and the plaintiff by her conduct had discharged Messrs. P and W from being her solicitors. A solicitor has the same lien upon translations as he has upon other documents, and the fact that they have been made by the Court's interpreters makes no difference. Having got the work done and paid for it, he need not part with such translations or produce them, except on terms which will secure him against fraud. BAI KESSERBAI v. NARANJI WALJI

The plaintiff not having satisfied in full his attorney's taxed bill of costs, the attorney applied for payment out of the fund in Court. Previously to this application, the fund had been attached by a third party. Held that the attorney was entitled to enforce his lien as against the attaching creditor for all costs incurred up to the date of attachment; that the attaching creditor was then entitled to be satisfied before the attorney could claim payment out of the balance in Court of any sum remaining due to him on account of his costs. No attorney has a right to insist on the payment of past costs as a condition to the further prosecution of his client's cause. Where an accused person is charged with and tried for various offences arising out of a single act, or series of acts, it being doubtful which of those offences the act or acts constitute, and where he has been acquitted by the verdict of a jury of some of such offences and convicted of others and appeals against such conviction, and where the Appellate Court reverses the verdict of the jury, and orders a retrial without any express limitation as to the charges upon which such retrial is to be held, such retrial must be taken to be upon all the charges as originally framed, and the acquittal by the jury on the previous trial upon some of such charges is no bar to the accused being tried on them again, as, having regard to the provisions of s. 423 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the provisions of s. 403 in that respect cannot apply to such cases. Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872. S. 194 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, must be read as a proviso to s. 190, and authorizes a Magistrate for reasonable cause to remand an accused person to jail without examining any witnesses. Where evidence was available, but it appeared necessary to the Magistrate to defer the examination of witnesses in order that further evidence might be produced (so that the enquiry, when commenced, might be continnous),—Held that such a reason recorded by the Magistrate, although not sworn to, justified a remand for five days and a further remand for four days. An accused person has a right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible, and the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against him is not a ground for detention for an inordinate period. Per KERNAN, J.—When a Magistrate defers the examination of witnesses, adjourns the enquiry, and remands the prisoner under s. 194 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872, he is bound to express clearly on the record the reasonable cause from which such action became necessary or advisable. BANKERS.

1. ——— Deposit of money—Obligation to keep funds separate—Breach of trust—Commission agents.—The insolvents carried on business as bankers and commission agents, receiving the money of their constituents on deposit, for investment or for remittance, charging a commission on each transaction, and allowing 4 per cent. interest on deposits. An opposing creditor, one of their constituents, sent them in April 1879 a letter instructing them to invest R40,000 in municipal debentures. The insolvents failed in November, and it was found on the evidence that they could not have procured the desired quantity of municipal debentures without paying more than the market price for them. They purchased R18,000 worth of such debentures, and were debtors to the opposing creditor for the balance. Held that the money was in their hands as bankers, and not as agents; and this being so, they were not bound to keep the R40,000 separate from their own funds, nor even after the letter received in April to set it apart for investment. 2. ——— Loss of hundi—Negligence—Criminal act of Bank servant.—A sent a hundi by post to a bank. The bank presented it for payment by one of its servants, B, who brought it back, reporting that payment had been refused. The manager of the bank, with the intention of returning it to A, placed it in an envelope, sealed and stamped, which was laid upon the table ready for the post, it being the custom of the bank to post all letters in that manner. The hundi did not reach A, and it afterwards appeared that B presented it for payment the following day, and obtained cash for it. Held that the bank was guilty of such neglect as to render it liable to A for the amount of the hundi. to pay dividends to shareholders at a time when the bank is insolvent and cannot legally pay dividends. In the case of a bank registered under the Indian Companies Act as a company limited by shares, and governed by the regulations contained in table A in the first schedule to the Act, it was held that the directors had dominion over the property and the management of the funds of the bank; that they were bound not to pay dividends except out of the profits of the bank; and that, if they dishonestly, that is, knowingly and intentionally, paid dividends to the shareholders out of deposits when there were no profits, intending to cause gain to themselves or others to which they were not entitled, or to cause wrongful loss to other persons, they were guilty of criminal breach of trust as bankers under s. 409 of the Penal Code; but that the manager and the accountant or assistant manager were not, within the meaning of the section, persons who were entrusted with property or with dominion over property as bankers or agents, and therefore did not come directly under s. 409, though they might be guilty of abetment under s. 409 read with s. 109, by conspiring with the directors to commit criminal breach of trust if they assisted the directors to obtain the sanction of the shareholders to the illegal payment of dividends, and did so for the dishonest purpose of causing wrongful gain or wrongful loss. Whether the illegal payment of dividends under the circumstances stated could be regarded as causing wrongful loss to the bank as a corporate body, quære. Whether moneys deposited in the bank by its customers and not in any way ear-marked could, after such deposit, be regarded as "property" of the depositors within the meaning of s. 409, quære. Held, also, that if the directors, manager, and accountant dishonestly, that is, to obtain wrongful gain for themselves or to cause wrongful loss to others, put before the shareholders balance-sheets which they knew to be materially false and misleading and likely to mislead the public as to the condition of the bank, and concealed its true condition, and thereby induced depositors to allow their money to remain in deposit in the bank, they were guilty of cheating in the aggravated form made punishable by s. 418 of the Penal Code; and if they acted together to put forward such a false balance-sheet, they were guilty of abetment by conspiracy to cheat. Semble—The making of such a false balance-sheet is not an offence within s. 191 of the Penal Code, and, where it is made prior to the commencement of the winding up of the company, is not an offence within s. 215 of the Companies Act (VI of 1882). A balance-sheet of a company under the Indian Companies Act must be a true balance-sheet, in the sense that it must represent the actual state of the company's assets and liabilities. If it falsely states the condition of the company, it is a false balance-sheet, though it follows the accounts as shown in the books of the company, and correctly represents what is in the books. A balance-sheet which showed all the debts owing to the company, amounting to R28 lakhs, under the head of assets, without specifying in accordance with the form of balance-sheet annexed to table A, which of such debts were good and secured, which good and unsecured, and which considered bad and doubtful, and also showed a divisible balance of profits amounting to ₹19,000, the facts being that out of the ₹28 lakhs some ₹13 lakhs were bad and irrecoverable, and that the capital, reserve fund, and other provision for bad debts had been lost, and that the company, instead of making profits, was, and long had been, insolvent, was found to be false and misleading. Having regard to the nature of the charges above referred to, the Court, under s. 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, rejected an application by the defence that the accused should be tried separately. It was not proved that A assented to the appropriation by G of the sum retained in payment of the promised present. A sued G to recover the sum retained. Held (1) that, if G was to be regarded as a barrister, he was under a disability to contract with A as to his fees; (2) that if G was to be regarded as a pleader, he was prohibited by a Circular Order of the Sudder Adalut from enforcing this contract. Semble—The decision in Kennedy v. *Brown, 13 C. 3. ——— Right of client to sue for return of fee when barrister was absent—Advocate and client.—Taking it that the rule of English law, that the relation of counsel or advocate and client creates mutual incapacity to make a binding contract of hiring and service, either express or implied, governs the relation of advocate and client generally in this country, there must be the relation of advocate and client to give rise to the incapacity, and the incapacity is strictly confined to contracts relating to service as an advocate in litigation and matters ancillary to such service. The degree of barrister is but one of the qualifications for admission and enrolment as an advocate of the High Court. Where the defendant, a barrister who was not admitted an advocate of the High Court, or specially authorized to plead in the superior Court, accepted a vakalatnamah from the plaintiff to defend him upon a charge pending in the Session Court, and the defendant failed to appear on the day to which the trial of the plaintiff was adjourned, and the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the amount of the fee paid,—Held that the suit was maintainable. 5. ——— Use of farzi name.—In the case of a benami purchase, the mere use of the farzi name is sufficiently disposed of if the party whose name is used sets up no claim, and if there appears to have been long-continued possession on the part of the person claiming to be the beneficial owner. 7. ——— Lease taken in name of wife and son.—Where a father obtained, once and again, a lease in the name of his wife and son, paying the consideration-money out of his own funds, and on the decease of his wife obtained the lease in the joint names of the son and of his daughter by the deceased, and it was found that latterly the possession was not with the father,—Held that there was no error in law in the Judge's coming to the conclusion that the property was not intended by the father for his own benefit, but was given to his wife and children for their maintenance. ZEEMUT ALI v. ALIMOONISSA . 10 W. R., 277

8. ——— Purchase in the name of Hindu wife.—The question for decision was whether a purchase in 1842, in the name of a Hindu wife, of an interest in part of her husband's ancestral estate, was for herself, or for her husband, her name being used benami for him. The High Court, at the hearing in appeal, considered certain previous decisions in cases arising out of benami transactions. But in arriving at its conclusion, which was that the property was the wife's, it proceeded entirely on the evidence in the particular case. The judgment of the Judicial Committee, which also went upon the evidence, was, on the contrary, that the husband was, in fact, the purchaser, the purchase being benami in his wife's name. 11. ——— Property of husband standing in name of wife.—Certain property standing in the name of a wife was mortgaged by her. The mortgage debt was paid off. The mortgagee, having a decree against the husband, attached and sold the property. Held that, though payment of the mortgage debt by the wife might have given her a lien on the property to the extent of any money paid by her out of her own fund, the mortgagee's acting on the wife's assertion of title did not prevent him, when he subsequently discovered that the property was really the deceased husband's, from making it available for the satisfaction of his decree against the husband. 12. ——— Property acquired by Mahomedan married woman.—Where property is acquired by a Mahomedan lady living in a state of wedlock, and also by her legitimate daughter, a very small amount of evidence would suffice to dispose of the presumption arising from the fact of title deeds being with the lady, against the supposition of a benami purchase. After his death, B sold her interest to her sister C, and C sold the patni talukh to D. The heirs of A brought a suit against D for the lands. Held that the lower Court might, upon these facts, infer that the grant of the patni talukh by A to his daughters was by way of provision for them, and that it was not a case in which the daughters held benami for the father. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 resisted on the ground that S's conditional sale did not pass the rights and interest of P, which they bought at an auction sale in execution of a decree against P. Held that the decree of foreclosure was good and binding against Nos. 1 and 2, unless they could show fraud. If property is purchased in the name of a benamidar, and the indicia of ownership are placed in his hands, the true owner can only get rid of the effect of an alienation by showing that it was made without his acquiescence, and the purchaser took with notice of the fact. Reversing decision of lower Court in FUKEEROODDEEN MAHOMED AHSUN CHOWDHRY v. KURREEM BUKS CHOWDHRY . . . 5 W. R., 43

24. ——— Breach of covenant—Cause of action—Plaint—Consent of benamidar.—The plaint alleged that the three first defendants with a brother, since deceased, purchased a patni mehal therein described ; that the same was thereafter sold for arrears of rent, and purchased by the said three defendants with their own funds ; but that the Collector, in compliance with their petition, entered the name of their mother, the fourth defendant, as the purchaser. The plaint then alleged a subsequent sale by the three first defendants to the plaintiff ; that they, the said defendants, caused a kobala to be executed by the fourth defendant, and that they, being the real owners, became witnesses to the deed, and received the whole of the consideration-money, and prayed by reason of ouster and disturbance alleged for damages against all the defendants for breach of the following covenant contained in the kobala : "If any one making any objection to the sale by me of the said mehal give you trouble in any way, then I will put matters straight. If I fail to do so, I will return the consideration-money. If I do not return it, you will realize it by means of a suit." The Civil Judge in whose Court the plaint was filed held that no cause of action was shown, and the High Court on appeal remanded the case to try whether there had been the ouster and disturbance alleged, and whether, under the circumstances, they constituted a breach of the contract. The High Court, however, dismissed the suit against the three first defendants, holding that the mother only was bound by the contract. Held by the Privy Council that the plaint disclosed a cause of action against all the defendants, and that the case must be remanded accordingly. One issue raised by the plaint was whether the kobala was really entered into by the mother as the agent and on behalf of the three first defendants, and by their authority. 27. ——— Benami purchase by judgment-debtor of property subject to mortgage decree—Effect of.—P L brought a suit against H, and, while it was pending, executed a bond in favour of R C hypothecating the property in dispute. The suit was dismissed with costs, and another suit was brought by one P M upon the bond, and, while it was pending, the property in dispute was sold in execution of H's decree for costs and purchased by S. The day after this, i.e., on 10th November 1868, P M obtained a mortgage decree, which he transferred to R B, who executed it and attached the property in dispute, when S intervened, objecting that the mortgage, the mortgage decree, and the transfer of the decree were all fictitious and collusive, and brought about by P L. This objection having been rejected, a suit was brought on the same ground against R B, P M, and the widow of P L to establish S's rights and to stop the pending sale. The property was, however, sold and purchased by D, who was then made a defendant in the suit. Both the lower Courts found that R B was a benamidar for P L, and upheld the title of S in preference to that of D. Held on the principle of In re Suroop Chunder Hazra, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 938 : 9 W. R., 230,—viz., that the purchase by a judgment-debtor extinguishes the decree,—that the same result followed in a benami transaction when the decree was a mortgage decree, and therefore, although S by virtue of his auction-purchase was not entitled to the property in dispute, yet he was entitled to a declaration that, so far as the amount of his purchase-money went to satisfy the decree of November 1868, it should be considered a charge on the property. A benamidar may maintain a suit in his own name, but the Court will put the defendant in the same position as if the real were the actual plaintiff. One D, an agriculturist, purchased certain land benami for K, a non-agriculturist, and brought a suit for redemption under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. Under the notification of the Government of India, No. 2092, dated the 29th July 1881, the fees in case of suits by agriculturists for redemption were remitted, and the plaintiff, therefore, paid no stamp duty on the plaint. Held that D might maintain the suit in his own name, but must pay the usual stamp fees, and that the suit should proceed as an ordinary suit, as though K was the nominal as well as the real plaintiff. question is, whether property bought and held in the name of another than the party claiming as the real purchaser is the property of that other or merely bought and held in his name (benami) for the claimant, the criterion is to consider from what source the purchase-money came; the presumption is, that a purchase made with the money of A in the name of B is for the benefit of A; and where the purchase is by a father, whether Mahomedan or Hindu, in the name of his son, there is no presumption of an advancement in favour of the son. 46. ——— Benami purchase—Whether property was held benami for the claimant or was a gift to the holder—Evidence of ownership—Source of purchase-money.—The claimant, having supplied the purchase-money on the sale of the village in suit, took the transfer by sale-deed in the name of the first defendant, who remained in possession of it, receiving rents. The claim was for proprietary possession by the purchaser on the ground that the property was held benami for him. The first Court decreed the claim. The Appellate Court reversed this decision. The first Court had attributed too much to the fact that the plaintiff had supplied the purchase-money—an important fact in most of the cases raising the question of benami, or not benami, but not the only test of ownership. Here the source of that money was consistent with the claimant's having, as the defence alleged, intended to make a gift of the property to the holder of it; and the right inference from the fact was that it was not held benami for the claimant, but belonged to the defendant. Purchase of a talukh in Bengal by a Hindu in his eldest son's name, the conveyance, though in the English form of lease and release, held to be a benami purchase, and the son in whose name it was purchased declared to be a trustee, for the father, and the talukh part of the father's estate. Where bonâ fide creditors of the ostensible owner of property are claimants on that property, the Court will require strict proof on the part of any one seeking to have it declared that he held it only benami. When the rights of creditors are in issue in such a transaction, very strict proof of the nature of the transaction should be required from the objector to such rights, and the burden of proof lies with more than ordinary weight on the person alleging that the purchase was intended for the benefit of the son. alleging that a certain deed of mortgage was executed by M B benami for the benefit of H B, through whom the plaintiff claimed, and also alleging that H B had advanced the money for the mortgage out of her own moneys, it was held that, if it could be shown that the money advanced was the money of M B, who executed the mortgage, it was immaterial to consider who was the nominal mortgagee, as the plaintiff could not set up a title inconsistent with the title set up in the lower Courts. In the absence of proof sufficient to establish the title of H B, and to show that the money was advanced by H B, the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. BHAWUN DOSS v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN with the money of the plaintiff, and afterwards agreed to execute a deed of release in favour of plaintiff, but without doing that he fraudulently executed a deed of sale in favour of defendant No. 1, who had notice of plaintiff's title. In a suit by plaintiff for recovery of possession and declaration of title of the property it was contended that s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 was a bar. Held per MACLEAN, C.J., and GHOSE, J., that s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 is a penal section and ought to be construed strictly and literally, and in construing the section the Court ought not to go beyond the strict letter of the language used or to put a construction upon that language which would have the effect of materially extending the operation of the section. Held further by MACLEAN, C.J., that s. 36 is no bar to the suit, inasmuch as this is not a suit "to oust the certified purchaser," but to oust somebody else, although he claims through the former; and the true ground upon which the suit is based is the fraud of defendant No. 2, of which defendant No. 1 had notice. Held per GHOSE, J., that the suit might well be regarded as based upon the ground of fraud, and in this view of the matter the case falls outside the provisions of s. 36 of the Revenue Sale Law. Buhuns Kowur v. *Lalla Beharee Lall, 14 M. Subsequently the mother mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit, obtained a decree, and had the property sold and purchased it himself. Upon his being resisted by the daughter in attempts to get his name registered as proprietor, he instituted a suit against both mother and daughter to establish his rights to the property. The daughter thereupon objected that such suit would not lie by reason of the provisions of s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the provisions of that section, which were intended to prevent fraud, were inapplicable to the

A decree for redemption was passed, which was reversed on appeals filed by the supplementary defendant and the kanomdar respectively. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal against the decree in the first-mentioned appeal, joining the kanomdar as respondent. Held that the plaintiffs could not succeed, as the kanomdar was not a party to the appeal against which the second appeal was preferred. Semble, apart from the above objection, the plaintiff was not entitled to a declaration that the purchase by the supplementary defendant was benami for the tarwad of the original jenmi and consequently invalid as against the plaintiff. Kanizak Sukina v. *Monohur Das, I. The plaintiff then brought a suit against S and F's representative for a declaration that the property was the property of his debtor F, and was therefore liable to be sold in execution of his decree. Held that the suit was not barred by s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Kanizak Sukina v. *Monohur Das, I. J.—The operation of s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 is not confined to disputes between certified auction-purchasers and persons who allege that such auction-purchasers purchased on their behalf as their benamidars, but extends to cases where the dispute is between the certified purchasers and third persons who allege that the certified purchasers are not the real purchaser. ——s. 1—Estate—Lands not permanently settled—Sunderbund estate—District of which portion only is permanently settled—Bengal Regulations IX of 1816 and III of 1828—Estate—Bengal Act VII of 1868.—The plaintiff was the auction-purchaser at a sale under Act XI of 1859 by the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs for arrears of revenue of an estate in the Sunderbunds on which the defendant was the holder of a mokurari mourasi jungleburi tenure, under which he was to clear away the jungle and then to cultivate the land with paddy. The estate was one borne on the register of revenue-paying estates in the Collectorate of the 24-Pergunnahs, and therefore within that Collectorate with regard to the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1868, s. 10. The district of the 24-Pergunnahs is a permanently-settled district, but the portion of it forming the Sunderbunds was declared by Regulation III of 1828, s. 13, not to be included in the permanent settlement. The Sunderbunds tract was, moreover, under Regulation IX of 1816, formed into a separate jurisdiction for settlement purposes under an officer styled the Commissioner of the Sunderbunds, who is subject to the direct control of the Board of Revenue, and independent of the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs. Held that, though there was no permanent settlement of the lands sold to the plaintiff, they fell within the definition of an "estate" as given in Bengal Act VII of 1868. 3. ——Decree transferred to Civil Court for execution—Appeal—Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 108—Act X of 1859, ss. 153, 155.—In a suit brought for recovery of ₹75 for arrears of rent, the plaintiff obtained an ex-parte decree on 18th March 1869, in the Court of the Deputy Collector. In October 1871, he applied to the Munsif for and sued out execution of his decree. In January 1872, one of the defendants applied to the Deputy Collector for a review of his judgment, and the Deputy Collector admitted the review and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal, the Judge held that the Deputy Collector had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for review or to hear the case, the decree having been transferred under Bengal Act III of 1870 to the Munsif for execution, and reversed the judgment of the Deputy Collector. Held that, the suit having been decided by the Deputy Collector before Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation, the procedure, therefore, would be that laid down by s. 108 of the Act, i.e., under Act X of 1859, and the appeal would lie to the Collector, not to the Judge under ss. 153 and 155 of that Act. The decree alone was trasferred to the Civil Court, and the application for review was rightly made to the Court of the Deputy Collector. IN THE MATTER OF RAMSOONDER BANDOPADHYA . . . . 10 B. L. 1. ——— Income tax—Suit for arrears of rent—Set-off—Effect of Act on agreement made before passing of Act.—In 1862, at the time the income tax was in force, A made a patni-settlement of certain lands with B, B agreeing to pay any enhancement of the revenue that might be made by Government at any time, or "any impost in future to be levied by Government, the income tax to be paid by A according to his income, B having nothing to do with the same." In 1876 A brought a suit against B for arrears of rent. B, under the contract, claimed to have set off, as a tax on income, a sum which he had paid under the Road Cess Act, which had been passed in 1871, after the Income Tax Act had been repealed. Held that the tax imposed by the Road Cess Act passed by the Bengal Council could not be considered to be a tax on income; the income tax having been a tax imposed by the Government of India on a person's annual income, levied upon whatever actually came to his hands as income, and not upon the value of his property; and that, therefore, B could not set off the amount as being income tax. Held also that, although the Road Cess Act contains no saving clause in favour of contracts, it does not prohibit in future the making of contracts which shall interfere with the incidence of the road cess as directed by the Act, nor vacate contracts that may have been made before the passing of the Act; and in the absence of any provisions to that effect, an agreement entered into before the passing of the Act could not be affected by the subsequent passing of the Act. In a suit by the zamindar for increase of rent, the defendants claimed to set off a sum representing the amount which the zamindar was bound to contribute under the Road Cess Act and Public Works Cess Act, and which amount they had paid to the Collector. Held that the amount in question came within the terms of the kabuliat, and that the defendants were not entitled to the set-off claimed by them. Surnomoyee Dabee v. *Purresh Narain Roy, I. 2. ——— s. 3 and ss. 9, 10, 23, 25, and 26—Sale for arrears of road cess, Effect of—Right of purchaser—Interpretation clause, construction of.—In a suit on a bond by which certain land admittedly lakhiraj was mortgaged, the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property at an auction sale for arrears of road cess due under Bengal Act X of 1871 was added as a defendant, and the lower Courts, holding that the effect of such a sale was to pass the property to the defendants, free of incumbrances, made a decree excluding that portion from liability in respect of the mortgage-bond. Held, on the construction of Bengal Act X of 1871, that the sale had no such effect, and that the whole of the property was liable to be sold in satisfaction of the plaintiffs' claim. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs, it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature. It does not follow, therefore, that because lakhiraj property is defined in the Road Cess Act, 1871, to be a tenure, all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally, or to particular classes of tenures, become annexed to lakhiraj property. 1. ——— Hindu Law—Mahomedan Law—Convert—"Justice, equity, and good conscience."—To entitle a person to have the Hindu or Mahomedan law applied to him under the first paragraph of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871, he must be an orthodox believer in the Hindu or Mahomedan religion. The mere circumstance that he calls himself, or is called by others, a Hindu or Mahomedan, as the case may be, is not enough. His only claim to have a special kind of law applied to him is that he follows and observes a particular religion that of itself creates his law for him. If he fails to establish his religion, his privilege to the application of its law fails also, and he must be relegated to that class of persons whose cases have to be dealt with under the latter paragraph of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 according to justice, equity, and good conscience. B, alleging that his family was a joint undivided Hindu family, sued R, his father, for a declaration that certain property was joint ancestral property, and for partition of his share according to the Hindu law of inheritance of such property, viz., one moiety. R set up as a defence to the suit that the members of the family were Mahomedans, and were therefore not governed by the Hindu law. The evidence in the suit established that the members of the family were neither orthodox Hindus nor Mahomedans. It also established that the Hindu law of inheritance had always been followed in the family. Held, following the principle enunciated above, that the family not being Hindus nor Mahomedans, the rule of decision applicable to the suit was neither Hindu nor Mahomedan law, but justice, equity, and good conscience; that the Hindu law of inheritance having always been followed in the family, it was justice, equity, and good conscience to apply that law to the suit; and that therefore B was entitled to demand partition of half of the family estate. Abraham v *Abraham, 9 Moore's I. 2. ——— Mahomedan Law—Pre-emption.—Under s. 24 of Act VI of 1871, Mahomedan law is not strictly applicable in suits for pre-emption between Mahomedans not based on local custom or contract, but it is equitable in such suits to apply that law. The application of Mahomedan law in a suit for pre-emption between a Mahomedan claimant of pre-emption and a Mahomedan vendee, on the basis of that law, is not precluded by the circumstances of the vendor not being a Mahomedan.
